GOING ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

Brave Woman and Seven Children in a Wagon.

VERMONT TO CALIFORNIA.

SHE WILL REACH HOME ON CHRISTMAS DAY.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cutter's Courageous Journey Made Amid Perils of Starvation and From Dangerous Men.

On a grass plot beside the dusty Manchester road just west of the city limits, there was an ill-fitted camp Tuesday morning, where dwelt a woman and seven small children in poverty and wretchedness.

The house was a rickety wagon with a covering of torn and wind-frayed canvass that once was white. A tattered blanket or two, a dilapidated camp stool and a few cooking utensils constituted the household effects.

There was a lean, yellow dog, panting in the shade, and a team of scrawny horses munched at a meager feed of hay at the back of the wagon.

The children ranged in age from the babe at the woman's breast to a brown-legged boy of about 14 years, who was carrying a bucket of water from a near-by spring.

This woman and the children were resting on a journey in the wagon across the American continent. The woman was the mother of the children and a widow without a penny in the world or a single possession beyond the wagon, the horses, the dog and the household effects.

"I am going to my father's home at San Diego, Cal.," she said to the Post-Dispatch. "We lived at Danube, Vt., until last March, when I packed up what things I had and took the children and started out to join my father. He is well enough fixed to take care of us after we get there, but he could not send any money for us to travel on. He has written to us several times since we started and told us to keep up courage; that we would be well taken care of at the end of the long trip.

"I have done what work I could on the road and Johnnie has made some money working for farmers. It does not take much for us to travel. All we need is food for ourselves and the team. But sometimes we have found it very hard to get even that small amount without actually begging it.

"I do not expect to reach my father's home until about Christmas time."

The woman is Mrs. Elizabeth Cutter.

The boy came into the city for assistance later in the day and was referred to the Merchants' Exchange.

Tom Francis took up a collection on the floor and secured $27.50, which the boy carried out to his mother. This sum will pay their traveling expenses for a month.

GEN. WHEELER AT THE FRONT

He Will Be Given Command of Funston's Brigade in Gen. McArthur's Army.

MANILA, Aug. 29, 6:10 p. m.—Gen. Wheeler has been ordered to report to Gen. MacArthur. He will be given command of Gen. Funston's brigade, which Col. Liscum has commanded temporarily. Gen. Wheeler will proceed to San Fernando tomorrow, after having spent a week in energetically visiting the lines.

Gen. Wheeler said to a representative of the Associated Press: "I am much pleased with the situation. I think that when Gen. Otis gets more troops he will make rapid progress. The country is more favorable for military operations than supposed. The impression that the country is unhealthy is wrong."

The railroad to Angeles will be restored within a week and Gen. MacArthur will advance his headquarters to that place.

THIS BURGLAR RODE A BIKE.

Had an Up-to-Date Suit but Got No Booty.

ORIGINAL AND DARING DEED.

DELIBERATELY PLACED HIS WHEEL NEAR AN ARC LIGHT.

When Driven From the House He Mounted His Machine and Fled Into Garrison Avenue.

St. Louis has the very latest in burglars. Even Chicago, progressive as she is in these matters, will have to come to the World's Fair City to see the most recent production of an advancing civilization.

The newest burglar is the bicycle burglar. He is not the fellow who steals your steed of steel that you leave on a park grass plot, but an ingenuous individual who has probably studied the laws of cause and effect bearing on suspicion as practiced by the police, and has arrived at the conclusion that a man arrayed in cyclists' garb would never be taken for a burglar by any policeman, new or old.

The new burglar in originality is on a par with the Chesterfieldian crook who some time ago tipped his hat to Miss Matilda McDonald on Garrison avenue, and while politely inquiring about her health snatched her purse from her hand and then made off with the "leather" while Miss McDonald stood entranced by his audacity.

The bicycle burglar made his debut about 3 a. m. Monday at the rooming-house kept by Mrs. J. W. Fox at 3010 West Chestnut street. He did not secure any booty, but that was not his fault; he was ambitious and energetic.

The first floor parlor of the Fox house is occupied by Harry Harrington, leader of the Harrington String Band, and Mrs. Harrington. The Harringtons heard a noise about their window screens Monday morning about 3 o'clock. Harrington lay quiet and soon saw outside the window a bicycle cap gradually rising above the sill.

The cap was on top of a head which soon appeared beneath it. The features could not be distinguished by the Harringtons for the light from the corner arc lamp was behind the head and the room was in darkness.

A pair of hands appeared alongside of the head and the screen was quickly removed and almost without noise. The hands were placed on the sill, the head disappeared and reappeared like a bounding ball, a body followed and in a trice a man in bicycle togs was in the room.

Harrington leaped out of bed. The burglar thought there was business for him elsewhere at that time.

The burglar seemed surprised and pained. He threw up his hands in the position of pugilistic defense and leaped backwards to the side of the window. And he did not pause there either, save to turn around. He scrambled out of the window in such an awkward manner that he bumped his head on the sash and exclaimed ungentlemanly.

Harrington rushed to the window. The burglar was in the gutter. There was a bicycle there also, waiting as patiently as an honest man's wheel would. The burglar did not do the pedal mount or anything fancy. He simply vaulted into the saddle and sprinted down the street.

As the wheel whizzed around the corner into Garrison avenue, 50 feet away, the burglar was humped over it like Jimmy Michael following pace. Harrington, in the window, then saw that the burglar was masked and the electric light rays that glistened on the wheel spokes shone on something bright that dangled from the rider's belt and looked like a pistol.

WINEROOMS ARE ILLEGAL.

Excise Commissioner so Notified the Police Board.

POLICE POWER IS AMPLE.

THEY CAN BE CLOSED AT ANY MOMENT.

Excise Commissioner Says He Is Tired of Waiting on the Police and He Will Begin a Sweeping Crusade Alone.

Excise Commissioner Charles P. Higgins places all the responsibility for the wineroom evil upon the police department, and declares that he has been ready at all times to do his duty, if the police had furnished him the evidence which he says is necessary for the refusal or revocation of saloon licenses.

He has made up his mind, however, to act as best he can without the assistance of the police department. He has not determined his line of action, but says when he is ready he will "make a clean sweep." He says this with a significance which leads to the belief that his action will not only include the disreputable wineroom, but also places classed as respectable, at which liquors are sold to women.

On Aug. 7 Mr. Higgins wrote a letter to Chief of Police Campbell, notifying him that saloons with wineroom attachments and wineroomes maintained separately from saloons were contrary to law, and that all licenses issued to such places were subject to revocation. He says he received no reply to this letter.

Mr. Higgins says his letter was meant as a plain notification to the Chief that he was ready to do his part of the work of suppressing the wineroomes, if the police department would furnish him the evidence upon which to act.

"I have always been ready," said Mr. Higgins, "to do my part toward the enforcement of the anti-wineroom ordinance. It has been said that I could stop the evil at once by revoking the licenses of those saloon keepers who maintain wineroomes, and by refusing to issue licenses to saloon keepers who persist in violating the law. This is true. I can do all this, and am ready to do it, whenever the police department furnishes the evidence, as it is required to do by law. How am I to know who is maintaining wineroomes?

"I have no means of ascertaining who is violating the law.

"Of my own knowledge, of course, I have evidence against a few saloon keepers, but it is useless to proceed against a few, and let the many continue breaking the law.

"I have never failed to respond to the police when they have furnished me evidence. In July the chief notified me that Jarvis Rothschild, who conducts a saloon at Sixth and Elm streets, was conducting a wineroom. I took up the case at once, and would have closed the place, but the chief arranged a compromise, by which Rothschild agreed to do away with his wineroom. These facts and others fully vindicating my course are shown by correspondence on file in my office.

"I have decided to act on my own responsibility, but I am not ready to announce my course. I will consult a lawyer and see what I can do. I am determined on one point, however, and that is that when I do act, it will be a clean sweep. There will be no discrimination, and everybody that comes under the law will feel the effect."

Mr. Higgins was asked if he meant by his last remark that he would attempt to bring places that are considered respectable under the law.

"I don't care to say now what I mean. I will take the public into my confidence when I am ready to act. It would not do to expose my plans before I am ready to do something. It would only give the enemy a chance to arrange for the attack."

PLEASANT DAYS TO CONTINUE

No Sign of Rain or Change in Temperature Says the Weather Bureau Man.

"Dont' look for cooler weather just yet," said Dr. Hyatt Tuesday morning as he removed his high collar and turned the electric fan his way. "The whole trouble is with that pesky 'low.'

"It is still hanging over Nebraska and Utah shutting out the cool breezes behind it. According to Hoyle, that 'low' should have passed east yesterday, but it did not, and the cold wave in the Northwest is losing its strength. I am afraid now if the 'low' does move the difference in temperature will not be noticeable here.

"What's the matter with this weather, will you tell me? Nice breeze every day to temper the sun's heat, and cool, pleasant nights—what do you expect in August? This weather suits me, and has to go, so you can state that for the next 24 hours Hyatt's special brand will be on the market—generally fair, with no change of temperature."

THE FINAL PLOT TO CONVICT DREYFUS.

Paty de Clam to Swear That Col. Henry Confessed That He, Esterhazy and Dreyfus Were Confederates.

THE DEFENSE PREPARED TO MEET THIS DESPERATE MOVE.

M. de Freycinet Explodes the Story of the Jewish Bribery Fund; Col. Cordier Turns a Strong Light on the Conspiracy and Declares Dreyfus Innocent.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
Copyright, 1899, by Press Publishing Company.

RENNES, Aug. 29.—The defense learned to-day that the generals, adopting new tactics, will try to connect Esterhazy with Dreyfus.

Esterhazy's treason is now so glaring that the generals deem it impossible to longer contest it. But a complete, ingenious system is being elaborated to prove that even if Esterhazy actually sold documents, it was Dreyfus who abstracted them from the war office.

Each side keeps spies in the other's camp. So the Dreyfusites were warned some time ago that the generals were holding in reserve such a plan of accusation, but they seem to have learned only to-day that it was about to be acted upon.

My informant, who moves in the very heart of affairs, adds that Demange, of counsel to Dreyfus, has been in constant communication with Panizzardi, the former attache of the Italian Embassy in Paris.

When the scheme to connect Dreyfus with Esterhazy was mentioned to Panizzardi, he got permission from the Italian Government to forward several documents which he bought driectly from Esterhazy, and which are in Esterhazy's handwriting.

These documents were abstracted several years before Dreyfus entered the war office.

It is thought that Du Paty de Clam, who is still wholly in the generals' hands, will be used in an attempt to substantiate their weird tale of Dreyfus' complicity with Esterhazy.

PATY DE CLAM'S PLOT.

Du Paty de Clam will make a written statement, which will be put forward as a complete, desperate confession by him. In this he will state that Col. Henry, in his last interview with him in Fort Mount Valerien, before Henry committed suicide, confessed that he, Dreyfus and Esterhazy were confederates. According to this confession, when Dreyfus was arrested Henry and Esterhazy promised him that if he would not denounce them they would in some way secure his liberation. This is to explain Dreyfus' declaration, "within three years my innocence will be recognized."

It is expected that if a false confession of Du Paty de Clam is used it will assert that when Dreyfus was on Devil's Island, Henry and Esterhazy determined to keep him there at any cost. So Henry committed forgeries.

Du Paty de Clam will explain his delay in making known Henry's confession by saying he reasoned thus:

"Dreyfus is in Guiana, Esterhazy is in exile, Henry is dead. Why should I increase the agitation and add to the dishonor of the army by making useless revelations?"

If, as M. Demange is confident he will do, Panizzardi sends the documents I have mentioned to the court-martial, this last card of Mercier, Roget and Gonse will be trumped. Even that they think of playing it proves their desperation is now anything to convict Dreyfus.

I learn to-day that Gen. de Boisdeffre, who lately has unwillingly followed the lead of the others, absolutely refuses to countenance this last laborious lie, and threatens to expose it if they attempt to palm it off.

In support of the above, a telegram from London has been received here to-day which says that Col. Panizzardi has made the statement that the initial "D" in the "canaille de D—" documents means Dubois, who is alias for Col. Du Paty de Clam.

M. de Freycinet, the aged French statesman, was to be the star witness of the prosecution to-day. By Freycinet the generals hoped to establish the existence of a bribery fund of millions piled together by the Jews of all lands to buy the acquittal of Dreyfus. By means of this fund it has been charged Esterhazy was induced to confess that he wrote the bordereau. But De Freycinet gave no evidence to show that he knew of the existence of such a fund. He had heard it spoken of. That was all.

BOLD COL. CORDIER.

But there was one witness to-day who gave the most important and lucid testimony of the whole trial. His name is Cordier, a colonel of the French army.

Col. Cordier was acting chief of the

CHARLES LOUIS DE FREYCINET.

M. de Freycinet, who was a witness at the Dreyfus trial to-day, has occupied nearly every post of prominence in France, except the Presidency. He has been Premier, President of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies and has held almost every portfolio in the Cabinet. Besides this public service he is a member of the Academy of Sciences and one of the "Immortals" of the French Academy. He is a graduate of the Polytechnic School of the class of 1848, and at 71 is still one of the strongest men in France. He is a small-sized person. His scant hair and gray whiskers are always carefully combed and brushed, his shoes are well blackened, his clothes fit nicely and his linen is immaculate. His voice is low and mild, almost caressing.

RIGHT WOMAN WRONGLY HELD.

Jessie Parker the Beneficiary of a Mistake.

MABEL SMITH GOES FREE.

ERROR WAS THE RESULT OF CONFUSION IN COURT.

A Semi-Humorous Finale to a Trial of Negroes in Which the Marshal's Office Suffers.

A comedy of judicial errors was played in Judge Kinsey's court with Judge Kinsey and his marshals as chief actors. A batch of negro prisoners was the amused audience and probably they are laughing still. Two of them have special cause for their merriment.

As a result of the errors Jessie Parker was held in prison four hours by the marshals, though she had been adjudged innocent, notwithstanding Judge Kinsey meant to adjudge her guilty. She was released with apologies.

Mabel Smith, whom Judge Kinsey adjudged was guilty, was released by the marshals nearly before the court's words had left his lips.

Tuesday morning the tangle was untied by Judge Kinsey remitting the fine and thus throwing the entire matter out of court.

Jessie Parker, Mabel Smith, Dan Curtis and Charles Steptoe were on Judge Kinsey's docket Monday morning charged wit disturbing the peace. Their cases were numbered from 48 to 51 inclusive. All parties to the suit are colored.

There was much testimony and the usual amount of disturbing noises. The City Attorney was compelled to stand almost against the witness testifying and the court leaned forward to hear the testimony.

After Judge Kinsey had sifted the evidence he made this announcement:

"No. 49 fined $5 and costs. Nos. 48, 50 and 51 discharged."

Marshals Loos and Vermillion waved the two men and one of the women out. They did not need a second invitation.

The other woman was escorted to the cage and when court adjourned she was marched back to the hold-over in the basement of the Four Courts, there to await the arrival of the "Black Maria" en route to the Workhouse.

At 3 o'clock the prison van drove up to the Four Courts. Marshals Loos and Vermillion went into the hold-over for the convicts. The executions showed that Mabel Smith was among the prisoners. No one in the hold-over answered to the name. The cells were searched and for a while the marshals thought that some magician had turned their prisoner loose. They called in Chief Deputy Fred Smith, but he could not straighten matters.

Then the marshals, thinking that Clerk Reagan had possibly made a mistake, visited him. He produced his records and they showed that Mabel Smith had been fined and remanded to the custody of the marshals. He condoled with the marshals for having lost her.

Then Reagan went downstairs with the officials and there Jessie Parker was found. The mistake was apparent; the wrong woman had been locked up. She was immediately released.

Loos went out on a scouting tour Monday night hunting for Mabel Smith. Tuesday morning she was still at liberty and the Marshal's office was maintaining silence about the whole affair.

POLE WILL YET BE REACHED

Explorer Wellman Still Confident the Overland Route Over Franz Josef's Land Is Feasible.

HULL, England, Aug. 29.—Walter Wellman, the Arctic explorer, has arrived here. He is still compelled to walk with crutches as a result of the injury which compelled return of himself and party when they had reached latitude 82. Mr. Wellman says that if he had not been injured the party would certainly have gone to latitude 87. As it was, the expedition was a success in the discovery of new islands and the securing of a fairly accurate map of Franz Josef's Land as far north as it has been explored. The provisions left on the island for Prof. Andree, the aeronaut explorer, were found untouched.

"I still believe it is possible to reach the pole by Franz Josef Land," declares Mr. Weelman, "but cannot say if I shall make another effort."

Mr. Wellman's right leg, broken by his fall in a crevasse, is still powerless, and he may never be again able to use it.

Rock Island Citizen Lost His Memory the Day He Buried His Brother.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PADUCAH, Ky., Aug. 29.—Henry Reticker, demented, is in the City Hospital here. He went to Cincinnati last February to bury the body of a brother. He does not know where he has been since February. He lives at 146 York street, Rock Island, Ill., and has a brother, Dr. J. M. Reticker, in Quincy, Ill. He was picked up here nearly dead and is in a serious condition.

Intelligence Department of the general staff.

He made many points clear. Among them the following:

1. That the date of the bordereau had been changed.

2. That leakages occurred before and after Dreyfus' connection with the general staff.

3. That the bordereau was given to Col. Sandherr by Henry.

4. That the Dreyfus family did not offer to bribe Sandherr.

5. That Henry committed forgeries to discredit Picquart, because Henry wanted the post to which Picquart had been assigned.

6. That Gen. Roget swore falsely before the court.

Col. Cordier was by far the most interesting witness of the trial. He had no fear of the generals, and talked as freely as if he were telling his story to intimates of the barrack room.

COL. CORDIER HELPS DREYFUS

De Freycinet's Testimony Did Not Establish the Existence of a Dreyfus Bribery Fund.

By the Associated Press.

RENNES, Aug. 29.—Gen. Mercier and most of the other Generals interested in the case were present this morning when the court-martial of Dreyfus was opened.

Col. Cordier, deputy chief of the Intelligence Department under the late Lieutenant-Colonel Henry, and who, since his previous appearance in court, had been released by the Minister of War, Gen. de Marquis de Gallifet, from his oath of professional secrecy, was the first witness called to-day. He testified to the effect that the late Col. Sandherr and not Lieutenant-Colonel Henry received the famous bordereau.

The witness deposed strongly in favor of Dreyfus and was most amusing in delivering his testimony. He kept the court and even the judges in roars of laughter by his comical manner and witticisms. He is a short stout man with a jolly face and a very red nose. He declared that his belief in the guilt of Dreyfus was first shaken when the date of the bordereau was given as May. The witness declared stoutly that he was now convinced Dreyfus was innocent.

Col. Cordier then spoke up strongly for Col. Picquart as a conscientious soldier and an honorable man and threw light upon the situation which existed in the offices of the Intelligence Department. He explained that Henry was jealous of Picquart because the latter was given charge of the statistical section which Henry had hoped to get for himself. Cordier expressed the belief that it was because of Picquart that Henry committed his forgery.

The evidence of Col. Cordier was delivered in a loud voice accompanied by humorous asides. He several times mentioned the Ambassador of Germany, which caused the president of the court, Col. Jouaust, to intervene and tell the witness that he must not introduce the Ambassador's name or refer to Germany. The hasty corrections of the witness when he repeated the same slips of the tongue, as he did more than once, and the amusing manner in which he avoided mentioning Germany at other times, caused the greatest merriment. During his testimony no fewer than five witnesses rose and asked to be confronted with him. But he received the interruptions with the utmost good humor.

Dreyfus spoke a few words at the conclusion of Col. Cordier's statements. He said the scene which proceeded his arrest was so fantastic that it completely bewildered him and merely left a blunted impression on his memory.

The prisoner is now accustomed to his surroundings and has apparently recovered his self-confidence, as he speaks readily and clearly and follows the witnesses closely, taking notes of various points of their depositions.

Maj. Lauth first confronted Col. Cordier and tried to score against him by pointing out that Cordier was incorrect in saying there were no anti-Semites on the general staff since Cordier himself was one. The Colonel retorted, turning the tables on the Major, as, raising his hands, he cried:

"Quite true. I was an anti-Semite, but I never bore false witness against the Jew. I am an honest man."

The audience applauded these remarks.

Col. Cordier then administered a well-deserved snub to Maj. Lauth by remarking that he (the Colonel) might be allowed to know more than Maj. Lauth with reference to the work of the Intelligence Department, since he (Cordier) replaced Col. Sandherr as Chief of the Department whenever Sandherr was absent, while Maj. Lauth," the witness concluded, "was merely my assistant. My assistant, mark you."

Maj. Lauth did not enjoy this little scene at all.

Gen. Roget next confronted Col. Cordier. The General assumed the same supercilious air which characterized him when he appeared at the witness bar, strutting about the stage in disdainful attitudes. His evidence, however, was not very striking, nor was that of Col. Fleur, or Archivist Gribelin, who also contested minor points of Cordier's deposition. Finally Gen. Mercier, who evidently appeared in order to demonstrate the baselessness of the stories of his intentions to fly and to show his determination to fight to the last, confronted Col Cordier. The General's remarks were of small importance, the most interesting being his repetition of Col. Sandherr's opinion of Mathieu Dreyfus when the prisoner's brother went to see the Colonel to ask for justice in behalf of Capt. Dreyfus. Mercier admitted Sandherr said: "Mathieu Dreyfus impressed me as an honest man who was prepared to make any sacrifice to save his brother."

M. de Freycinet, the former Minister of War, former Minister of Foreign Affairs and Premier, followed Col. Cordier on the witness stand.

The courtroom was packed to its utmost capacity as the distinguished French statesman began his deposition. It was evident the public was anxious to see the former Minister at the witness bar. He is a venerable-looking man, with scanty snow-white hair, and was dressed in a blue serge suit. He wore a little black bow for a necktie and gave his testimony seated and in a low voice.

This witness was expected to speak about the $5,000,000 francs supposed to have been contributed abroad, mainly in England and Germany, to the Dreyfusian war chest.

M. de Freycinet began by expressing the pain which he experienced at the troubles his country was undergoing. Later he said he remembered a conversation with Gen. Billot in which there was a reference to money coming from abroad in support of the Dreyfus agitation, which, while disinterested in France, might not be so abroad.

M. de Freycinet, however, did not remember the details of the conversation, nor could he say if any specific amount was mentioned.

M. de Freycinet then alluded to his fears that "attacks on the chiefs of the army might be prejudicial to discipline," adding: "Might not these attacks lead to the disappearance of discipline and what, then, would be the result if we found ourselves in difficulties with a foreign country?"

M. de Freycinet delivered a patriotic speech, rather than a deposition, concluding with the words: "All the world will accept your verdict, which will open an era of reconciliation."

The members of the court-martial treated M. de Freycinet with the greatest deference.

The president of the court, Col. Jouaust, declined to put to the witness some questions from Maitre Labori, leading counsel for the defense, on the ground that they had no direct bearing on the case. One of these questions referred to M. de Freycinet's personal opinion on M. Scheurer-Kestner, the formed vice-president of the Senate, who has interested himself strongly in behalf of Dreyfus. Although the colonel refused to put the question the witness replied that M. Scheurer-Kestner was his friend and that he had a high opinion of his character. M. de Freycinet was then conducted to the witness seats, where he sat for a few minutes beside Gen. Billot, chatting with that officer. He left the court later.

LABORI QUESTIONING WITNESSES.

Favorite attitude of Dreyfus' defender as he cross-examines the Generals who are striving to convict his client.

Of Labori's manner in handling a witness a London correspondent at Rennes says: "Labori is the very incarnation of the all-inquiring, all-conquering, relentless, resistless, remorseless might of the law. When he rises to speak the officers of the court sit in silence and hear his smashing blows, the prosecutor sits as if paralyzed, the Generals lay their heads together, the witness gives evidence with one eye on the court and the other on the cross-examiner."

FULL RECORD OF TESTIMONY

Col. Cordier Proves to Be a Staunch Dreyfus Witness, Fearless of the Generals.

RENNES, Aug. 29.—Following is the full record of the testimony:

The appearance of Col. Cordier, formerly Deputy Chief of the Intelligence Department of the War Office, as the first witness at the Dreyfus court-martial to-day aroused great interest, as, since his previous appearance the colonel has been released by the Minister of War from his oath of professional secrecy. Speaking in firm, audible tones the colonel testified that Sept. 23, 1894, he left Paris on a fortnight's leave of absence and that nothing was then known in the Statistical Department of the War Office of the discovery of treason.

Col. Cordier said that the day after he returned to Paris Col. Sandherr, who appeared greatly distressed, handed him a copy of the bordereau on foolscap paper. Sandherr and Cordier animatedly discussed the bordereau, Sandherr considering it ample evidence of treason. The document was photographed and an investigation was opened, resulting in suspicions against Dreyfus being aroused. Prior to this there was no presumption of Dreyfus' guilt. It was Oct. 8 that the suspicions of the prisoner's guilt became definite.

Witness said he believed the bordereau arrived at the War Office after Sept. 24. He could not say who received it. Very few officers were then aware that treason had been committed. Witness thought it necessary to enter these particulars in reply to the statements of his assistant, Maj. Lauth, before the Court of Cassation.

At this point Maj. Lauth, rising in the center of the court, exclaimed: "I beg leave to speak, my Colonel."

Proceeding with his testimony, Col. Cordier said he believed the bordereau was handed to Col. Sandherr by Col. Henry.

Cordier then explained what was the "ordinary channel" by which information reached the War Office.

The "ordinary channel," the witness said, was a very clever spy attached to the Intelligence Department, who had the habit of visiting great houses, but who preferred the company of servants to the company of their masters.

Cordier then described the method of piecing documents and showed how the bordereau was pasted together by Henry, who was usually entrusted with such work. The witness said piecing documents possessed fascination for the men who were engaged upon such work, "Like the passion of fortune telling by cards."

"Men who have once pieced paper," said the witness, amidst laughter, "will always continue to do so."

Referring to the spy who has been dubbed as the "ordinary channel," Col. Cordier said the former did not directly receive the documents from the embassy from which they were abstracted. A woman, he explained, served as an intermediary and the "ordinary channel" having been closed it was found necessary to negotiate directly with the intermediary, otherwise the woman with whom rendezvous were usually made in churches. But as the "ordinary channel" services were still available there his pay was continued. Possibly, continued the witness, the spy endeavored to renew his relations with the embassy.

Such was the situation at the moment of the reception of the bordereau.

Leakages for Which Dreyfus Was Not Responsible.

Dealing with the leakage discovered by the military authorities, Col. Cordier said he ascertained it was occurring at Bourges.

Witness recalled the fact that an artificer named Thomas was sentenced for treason in 1894. The foreign correspondents did not notice his arrest and consequently a letter addressed to him was intercepted and a reply was sent. This letter asked for plans of a shell. The headquarters' staff obtained the plans and sent them to Thomas' correspondents. The latter replied, thanking Thomas and enclosing bank notes, which were credited to the funds of the headquarters' staff.

Whatever has been said to the contrary, witness maintained that the leakage at Bourges could not be ascribed to Dreyfus.

This was also the opinion of Col. Sandherr, who frequently had recourse to witness' intimate knowledge of this question in the futile efforts to discover evidence against Dreyfus.

Cordier, whose evidence greatly interested his hearers, described the various leakages. He especially referred to a very serious case designated as "Leakage of St. Thomas Aquinas," in which a clerk of the Church of St. Thomas Aquinas, Paris, was mixed up in espionage and a serious leakage in the Ministry of Marine. The witness recalled how information of the leakage of 1894 was received primarily. The name mentioned was that of a gentleman, 45 years old, and decorated, who used to convey documents to the Embassy, which the witness described as a house with a large garden.

Col. Cordier emphasized the fact that the above personal description did not bear the slightest resemblance to Dreyfus, but resembled much more closely another officer whose name had been mentioned and who could no longer be prosecuted or convicted.

The witness then referred to the spy Guenee's conclusions to the effect that officers of the headquarters staff were guilty of treachery but the Colonel explained that it was very difficult to accept Guenee's statements as gospel.

Witness regretted Guenee's death, as he said the court would have been edified by his testimony in regard to the manner in which many things were fabricated.

Referring next to what Cordier styled the "huge undertaking of Richard Cuers, La Joux & Co.," the Colonel declared the object was nothing less than recruiting German spies for the service of the French government. He said the organization would have been of the greatest utility in the event of war, and said regrets were frequent during the last war in regard to the lack of spies.

Cuers, he pointed out, spoke English admirably, and therefore it could not be maintained that only German was spoken at the interview at Basle between Cuers, Henry and Lauth.

One of Cuers' special services, continued the witness, was furnishing Germany with false information, therefore was sometimes obliged to say he had succeeded in suborning a French officer, and, in this way, Cuers was induced to declare he had obtained the collaboration of an officer of the War Minister's staff. Proof of this could be found at headquarters in the dossier of false documents delivered to Germany.

"These documents," added Col. Cordier, "are no doubt in all the better order, because the archivist, M. Gribelin, wears blue spectacles." (Laughter.)

Col. Jouaust called the witness to order and the remark was withdrawn, witness declaring, amidst peals of laughter, "I'll escaped me, Monsier le President. I withdraw the spectacles."

Leaks Caused by Carelessness at Headquarters.

Cordier then described the events prior to the arrest of Dreyfus and showed that only a single real leakage, namely, the plans of the fortresses, had occurred at the time of his arrest. The document known as "Cette canaille de D——," he explained, was contemporaneous with this leakage.

"It has been said," said the witness, "that I made a mistake on this point and confounded the document with another containing the initial alone. I should like very much to see the document in order to assure myself that it is the one I am acquainted with. It is not, however, of any importance except to show that Gen. Roget's evidence concerning me is false from beginning to end." (Sensation.)

Gen. Roget asked leave to speak, but Col. Cordier continued, showing how leakage of plans of fortresses was facilitated by the carelessness of the headquarters staff and maintaining that the leakage was still occurring when the witness left the war office.

Reverting to the manner in which the suspicion against Dreyfus crystallized, Col. Cordier described the efforts to pry into the prisoner's life, and said the information at first received was very bad, and constituted strong proff against the prisoner. Later, however, it assumed quite a different aspect. It was admitted that before his marriage Dreyfus was not "unimpeachable morally, nor was he was entitled to wear a wreath of orange blossoms." Laughter.) But, Cordier added, after his marriage Dreyfus was quite different.

The witness also said that while Dreyfus boasted of his conquests, he (Cordier) was of the opinion that those who boasted the most accomplished the least. (Laughter.)

Dreyfus, he continued, bragged a great deal, and probably now repented having done so, and Dreyfus' inquisitiveness, according to witness, was probably explained by his knowledge that he would not long remain on the headquarters staff, and he decided to obtain all the information which might be useful to him in after life.

The Colonel then paid a tribute to the memory of Col. Sandherr, who examined the immense mass of documents relating to espionage and unearthed the "Cette canaille de D—" document, which seemed to the witness to date back to antiquity.

Showing That Date of Bordereau Was Changed.

In 1894 the witness regarded as insufficient the sole proof against Dreyfus, namely, the bordereau. He did not believe the prisoner was guilty, but the fact that the judges were unanimous in convicting him changed the witness' mind. His doubts, however, returned when he saw the date of the bordereau received in September had been fixed as May. Col. Picquart's investigation and the infamous campaign against Picquart increased the suspicions of the witness.

"In 1894," declared Col. Cordier, emphatically, "I had been reassured by the unanimity of the judges and I was absolutely convinced of the guilt of Dreyfus. Now I am absolutely convinced of his innocence." (Great excitement.)

Next the witness discussed the attacks on himself. He said he was astonished at being accused of being sounded because he was not given charge of the Intelligence Department in succession to Col. Sandherr, "as every one knew I wished to quit the service simultaneously with my friend Sandherr."

Replying to the President, Col. Cordier declared that the approaches of the Dreyfus family to Col. Sandherr were not attempts at corruption and M. Dreyfus' brother's remark, "My fortune is at your disposal," was only the expression of the family's ardent desire to save an innocent member of it.

Witness well remembered hearing that Esterhazy and Henry were in the Intelligence Department together about the year 1876, but he added Esterhazy had not since been employed there and if he had any relations with the department they must have been clandestine.

Replying to Col. Jouaust's request to state what he knew regarding Henry's relations with Picquart, Cordier said good fellowship prevailed in the department until the appearance of Henry, who had been forced on Sandherr. Henry had close relations with the supreme chief and his colleagues suspected he might report what he heard in the office discussions and what occurred in the department. Some supported Sandherr and some supported Henry. Among the latter was Gribelin. It was then, while the division was rampant, that the witness handed over his department to Col. Picquart. Henry was much incensed at being superseded by a junior officer, resolved to do everything to supplant him and, added the witness, the Henry forgery could have had no other object but to ruin Col. Picquart, with the view of giving Henry his place.

Maitre Labori asked the witness what he knew in regard to the arrest of Dreyfus and Cordier replied that his recollections on that point were not very definite. He found difficulty in recalling the names of those who were present at the dictation scene, but he was informed on several occasions as to what occurred. He remembered, he declared, that one of the proofs advanced against Dreyfus was that during the scene he looked in a mirror. That is going too far. If Dreyfus looked in the mirror it was because he had seen another head besides his own there. There was an arrangement of mirrors and since it must be told, I will say it. Behind the curtain were two ears, listening. Dreyfus, therefore, might have seen something besides his own face in the mirror."

M. Labori questioned the witness in regard to the letter mentioned in M. Ja Roche, Vernets evidence, referring to the spy "C. C. C." which was dispatched to the war office at the time of Picquart's arrival.

Cordier explained that it was a letter from an Italian lady with whom the department at that time, was corresponding through an intermediary at the foreign office.

"I greatly respect Italian ladies in general," said Gen. Cordier, "not when it is a case of espionage, and I advised Picquart not to make too much use of the lady's offers, saying to him: 'There must be no petticoats.'"

At this juncture M. Labori informed the president of the court that he had received a telegram signed "Pages," announcing the dispatch of a letter relative to the relations between Col. Sandherr and the Dreyfus family. Counsel added that he had himself received a telegram as follows:

"I declare Col. Sandherr told me distinctly that neither before or after the conviction was an offer of money made to him."

Col. Jouaust announced that he would not read the letter because he knew nothing of the writer and asked the usual question of Dreyfus, who replied that he would refer merely to the scene on Oct. 15, preceding his arrest.

"It was," he said, "so fantastic that I frankly confess I understood nothing connected with it. It was conducted under such conditions that I don't know what manner of brain could have conceived it, and when I left the extraordinary scene my head literally reeled, so I cannot remember the facts and details."

"I Am an Honest Man and I Have a Conscience."

Maj. Lauth, having been permitted to speak, said Col. Cordier's leave of absence commenced Sept. 13 and not Sept. 23, to which Cordier retorted that he was much surprised at contradiction on such an unimportant point. But nevertheless, his original statement was true.

Continuing, the Major commented upon Col. Cordier's testimony, especially the statement that there were no anti-Semites on the headquarters staff, remarking that there was one exception and that was Cordier himself, who always expressed antipathy to the Jews, especially when there was a question of introducing Dreyfus to the department.

"Yes," exclaimed Cordier, "quite true. I was an anti-Semite, but my opinions never went to the length of bringing false evidence against the Jews. (Sensation.)

"I am an honest man and I have a conscience." (Renewed excitement.)

Maj. Lauth proceeded to discuss other points. He said he himself pieced the "Cette canaille de D—" document, and added that as it was only received at the department at the end of 1893, it could not be regarded as ancient. He explained that the transition existing in the department was between the officers and Col. Cordier.

When the president asked Cordier if he desired to say anything in rebuttal to Maj. Lauth's statement, Cordier replied: "Nothing at all."

When, however, the Major asserted, in regard to the letter "C. C. C." that Cordier had nothing to do with the Italian affairs, which Sandherr conducted, Col. Cordier said: "As deputy chief, I was acquainted with all the work done, while Maj. Lauth was merely my assistant."

Col. Cordier Exhibits No Fear of Gen. Roget.

Gen. Roget then mounted the platform, where his appearance caused a general stir. He said he would not reply to Col. Cordier's statements concerning himself, "but," he added, "the witness has stated that what I said was false. He must now say in what I have been incorrect."

Col. Cordier: In everything.

Gen. Roget: Very well. Let us be exact. Let us take the case of Le Mercier-Picard.

Continuing, Gen. Roget entered into a lengthy explanation, denouncing Le Mercier-Picard as an imposter and swindler, apparently with the object of showing that Cordier's allegation that Le Mercier-Picard was employed by the general staff was unfounded.

Roget also referred to a letter to Mathieu Dreyfus attributed to Cordier, who again arose and protested against Gen. Roget's insinuations. He declared that when it became known that he was going to testify he was arrested several days and treated as a drunkard in order to minimize the value of his evidence. He also emphatically protested against a statement of the Figaro that he offered his services to Mathieu Dreyfus and said the Minister of War had authorized him, the witness, to prosecute the newspaper.

In regard to the forged letter to Mathieu Dreyfus, continued Cordier, investigation had shown that Le Mercier-Picard undoubtedly forged it.

Gen. Roget having pointed out that the letter in question was returned to the Col. Cordier expressed surprise at the fact that the letter was not delivered to the addressee, whose residence, he explained, was well known.

Major Lauth again asked permission to speak, but Col. Jouaust declared that the incident was not connected with the Dreyfus case and that the discussion must be terminated.

Gen. Roget: Very well, I will wait until Col. Cordier states exactly where my deposition is false before I reply.

Continuing, Gen. Roget proceeded to make the same attempt as Gen. Mercier to confound Capt. Freystaeter, saying that the leakages in regard to the Robin shell were only reported in 1896-1898.

This fact, he said, necessarily invalidated the Captain's statement that these leakages formed the subject of part of the secret dossier in 1894.

Capt. Freystaeter, however, merely mentioned "A shell" and not the Robin shell.

The General then denied that the leakages in the Ministry of War continued after the conviction of Dreyfus and said the information given to a certain power before Dreyfus was convicted was quite correct, while the information furnished afterward was incorrect. Col. Picquart's testimony in this connection, Roget asserted, was untrue. All the leakages subsequent to 1894 related to documents anterior to the arrest of Dreyfus.

When asked if he had anything to say, Dreyfus promptly rose and said:

"I never had any share in the preparation of plan 13, to which Gen. Roget alluded. This plan was executed in 1894. I had merely to superintend the printing of five or six copies of it. Gen. Roget also spoke of a letter from Capt. Dreyfus. I would be very glad to see that letter. I know nothing of it."

Col. Fleur appeared in the witness box to refute Col. Cordier's testimony. He declared that Aug. 23, 1894, Col. Cordier said to him: "Dreyfus is guilty, but there must be two others. There are three of them."

Col. Cordier shrugged his shoulders and admitted that just a week before the arrest of Henry he said forgery had been committed at the headquarters staff, but, said Col. Cordier, "I told the same thing to others the day after the posting up of the speech of M. Cavaignac, the Minister of War, by the Chamber of Deputies."

Archivist Gribelin also advanced and protested against Col. Cordier's statement.

He was followed by Gen. Mercier, who caused a sensation by indorsing Col. Cordier's statement with reference to the alleged attempt of Mathieu Dreyfus to bribe Col. Sandherr. The General said: "When Col. Sandherr reported his interview and I asked his opinion of it, Sandherr replied: 'He gave me the impression of being an honest man, resolved to sacrifice everything for his brother.'"

Freycinet Knows Nothing of the Bribery Fund.

After a brief adjournment, the session of the court was continued, the name of M. de Freycinet was called, and amidst suppressed excitement, the former Minister of War, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, and former Premier, took the witness stand.

M. Demange proceeded to question the former Minister. Counsel recalled Gen. Mercier's statement that M. de Freycinet told Gen. Jamont that 25,000,000 francs had been raised abroad for the defense of Dreyfus.

In reply, M. de Freycinet expressed the anguish which he felt at the sight of the trouble into which his country was plunged and said his whole desire was to see peace and calm restored.

In regard to the conversation referred to, the witness said: "Gen. Jamont made me a visit of courtesy on the occasion of my quitting office at the beginning of May. I received many similar visits. I don't think I exaggerate when I say I received a hundred such visits. I made no note of remarks exchanged by my different visitors. In the case of Gen. Jamont we, of course, talked about the case and the campaign speeches and press utterances which had been proceeding in different parts of the world during the previous two years.

"In regard to the Dreyfus case, I was led to say that our agents abroad reported that efforts had been made on the initiative of private individuals, in behalf of this campaign—a very disinterested campaign in France, I am sure, but less so abroad.

"I reported the estimates I heard had been made by people who professed to be well acquainted with the question of advertising in regard to the probable money value of the whole campaign throughout the world since its inception.

"That, Monsier le President, is a resume as complete as my recollection permits, of the conversation with Gen. Jamont. What struck me most was the identity of our anxiety in regard to the army. We mutually expressed uneasiness, for it must not be concealed that the present attacks have had a profound echo which might eventually endanger the cohesion of the army.

"You know well, gentlemen, that there is a higher discipline than even the military code, as I said in the chamber. How is this discipline, which comes from a soldier's confidence in his chiefs, to be maintained if these chiefs are depicted daily in the blackest colors? Was it not to be feared that at a given moment this confidence would disappear and what would be the result if we were engaged in external difficulties? (Sensation.)

"I adjure those of my countrymen," continued M. de Freycinet earnestly, "who participate in these attacks under the impulse of generous passion and with the object of serving a noble and elevated idea—I have no doubt they are led away—to take heed in the dangers to which they may involve the country.

Pleads With Both Sides to Remember Their Country.

The closing sentences of M. de Freycinet's remarks aroused great excitement in the court. He said in his most impressive manner:

"As Gen. Jamont said to me: 'It is high time to end it.' Let us cease throwing in one another's faces accusations which discredit us in the eyes of our rivals. Gentlemen, let us prepare—and I would that my feeble voice could be heard by all—let us

LOVE STORY IN THE DREYFUS TRAGEDY.

Romance of Capt. Freystaeter and His Bride Whose Motto Is "Better a Lower Rank and Unsullied Honor."

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

Copyright, 1899, by Press Publishing Company.

RENNES, Aug. 29.—"Better a lower rank and unsullied honor."

It was the beautiful Mlle. Manuel, then Capt. Freystaeter's fiancee, now his wife, who uttered those words at Versailles some months ago.

Freystaeter had recently returned from four years dangerous campaigning in Madagascar, where he was sent soon after being a judge at the first trial of Dreyfus.

Society, especially the society of the army, has long been acquainted with the daughter of the aristocratic Manuel family and the young hero of the last Algerian insurrection; the officer of Marine Infantry, who, later, drew a cry of admiration from the world by storming the almost impregnable forts at Tuyenquan, Tonquin, in the face of such resistance that more than three-fourths of the men he led were hacked to pieces.

When the news of the terrible fight reached France her people were wild with excitement.

Mlle. Manuel, then 16 years old, opened one day an illustrated newspaper. She was attracted by the portrait of a face at once gentle and full of character. It was the portrait of Lieut. Freystaeter.

The girl read his biography, which told of all his previous exploits, and finally, of the most brilliant episode of his career, the capture of the ocean forts.

Her enthusiastic nature was fired by admiration for this hero; she was young; the picture she observed showed a sympathetic visage.

On the impulse of the moment she wrote a few lines on her photograph and mailed it to the distant colony where Freystaeter, continuing his work, was pursuing that piratical tribe called Black Flags which harassed France's Far East Colony for seven years.

One night with a small reinforcement of troops there came to Freystaeter the first letters he had received in months. In one was the photograph of a beautiful girl, unknown to him, and on it were a few lines of handwriting.

What words were written there none but Mlle. Manuel and the soldier she loves have ever been allowed to know. But comrades say Freystaeter always carried the portrait in his breast—a precious treasure—and at night, sitting apart from the others, he was often seen to gaze long on the picture by the light of the camp fire and then to seem to dream of one afar.

Meantime at Versailles Mlle. Manuel was fast growing to be the beautiful woman she is now. The best and most desirable suitors who approached her and craved her hand met with a firm but kind refusal.

Four years passed; she was 20 years old, but none could move her heart. Her family, distressed, begged her for an explanation.

"I am in love," she finally confessed. "Some day the man I have chosen will come to me."

Neither love nor threats could gain more than that enigmatical answer from the proud young woman.

Who can tell what kept her and her lover true? Were they corresponding all these years? Or were they both so romantic, so trustful, so completely won by the portrait each had seen, that the pledge on her photograph sufficed? Again, none will know, for this man and woman have kept the subtle flavor of their love wholly to themselves.

Early in 1894 M. and Mme. Manuel received an unexpected visit from a fine-looking officer, whose face was young, whose hair was tinged with gray. A long conversation ensued.

The good people, with profound respect for traditions and the conventional, were almost stupefied as they listened to this unknown man, just returned from Tonquin, who announced he had come to claim their daughter.

Mademoiselle was called in. It was the first meeting between the girl, who five years before had sent her photograph, and the man who received it in the weird jungles of Cochin China.

What astonishment must have paralyzed the father and mother as they heard their daughter calmly announce that she was willing to marry the man she saw for the first time!

Because of M. Manuel's anger all Versailles soon learned of the extraordinary affair of the Manuel family and of their daughter, absolutely wild with the idea that she must become the colonial fighter's wife.

Moreover, Freystaeter is a Protestant, and therefore mademoiselle's parents stubbornly opposed the marriage. But nothing would discourage this pair, who, if they loved faithfully before they met, loved ardently after they knew each other, though the attitude of both was most respectful throughout. The thoughtful girl was unwilling to break into open rebellion against her parents, but Freystaeter was not the man to advise it.

All this was in 1894. Soon after the first trial of Dreyfus Freystaeter was promoted to be a captain and was assigned to Madagascar. His four years there failed to strain the love or to tire the patience of the woman who had given her heart to him.

Periodically the newspapers made known to her the full importance of his work in Madagascar and his daring feats, which he was too modest to describe in his letters.

He parents took advantage of Feystaetet's absence to bring greater pressure to force their separation. Instead, her devotion daily grew more absolute.

One day Freystaeter's name appeared in the list of wounded at the capture of an obscure village in the interior of Madagascar. Mlle. Manuel read his name and fell stiffly backward. For weeks her life was despaired of. The sudden news had brought on complete collapse of her constitution, undermired by the awful nervous strain, by the everlasting, cruel struggle.

Her parents' eyes were opened, their hearts were touched, they wept.

Their opposition ended when Freystaeter returned to France last spring. Miss Manuel and he were married.

But his happiness was marred by the consciousness that he had helped to blast the happiness of another. He received the news of Col. Henry's suicide while he was in Madagascar. From that day his conscience gave him no rest. Immediately upon his return to France he asked permission of the Minister of War to testify before the Court of Cassation.

The story of the petty persecutions he has endured because of his attitude never will be written.

Freystaeter is a good soldier. No injustice inflicted upon him could cause him to denounce his superior officers. He says little, talks only when he must, but no power on earth could shake his resolution.

His brother officers have refused to associate with him, his superiors have threatened him.

Once, while visiting the Manuels at Versailles, three of his superior officers came to dissuade him from the course his conscience dictated. He answered:

"I must; I regret I am compelled to make disclosures against members of the army But I must; it is my duty."

Then his friends present argued with him.

"You are ruining your career; your promotion to be Major will be indefinitely postponed."

Only one voice was raised in defense of his ideas. Mlle. Manuel, who had listened, broke her silence.

"Mieux vaut plus d'honneur et moins de galons," she said. (Better a lower rank and unsullied honor.)

The woman is as noble as the man; they are worthy of each other.

"Better a lower rank and unsullied honor." What a golden, guiding phrase for soldiers!

M'COSH CANNOT RECOVER.

Man Shot by Frank Ward Not Expected to Survive the Day.

S. A. McCosh, son of Charles McCosh, who was shot Monday morning by Frank B. Ward, wishes to correct a statement, in which it was alleged that he said that he did not know his father's address. He says he could not have made any such statement, as he knew that his father lived at 2221 Walnut street.

McCosh, the elder, was barely alive Tuesday morning. His son spent the morning at his bedside. The statement in a morning paper that an operation was performed is incorrect. No operation was performed, as it was thought to be useless.

SENATOR VEST ON THE ISSUES.

As in 1896, Silver Will Be in the Front Rank.

EXPANSION CUTS A FIGURE.

THE SOUTH IS STRONGLY AGAINST IMPERIALISM.

On the Trust Question Many New Strong Elements Will Be Found Battling on the Side of Democracy.

TORONTO, Can., Aug. 29.—Senator Vest of Missouri, now in Toronto, has been interviewed by the Globe on American politics. He referred to President McKinley's speech at Ocean Grove, laying down the administration's policy as to expansion.

Mr. Vest said the expansion question is causing misgivings in many States. Many prominent Democrats are in sympathy with the policy, while many leading Republicans are opposed to it. How important these differences of opinion are will not be known until after election. Expansion is not regarded favorably in the Southern States, where there is great outcry against the fruit imported from Porto Rico and Cuba.

The imperialists say these islands are great markets for American manufactures. "This is an illusory view," said Mr. Vest, "and at best a prediction."

As to the coming campaign Mr. Vest says the silver question is by no means dead. It was never more prominent as an issue than it is to-day. This is shown by the Tammany demonstration of July 4, when Mr. Hogg made his famous speech. In the West and South the silver agitation is more determined than in 1896. Mr. Vest said "this question will be a leading issue next year, and it is more than likely that it will receive a fuller measure of popular support than it did three years ago.

"The newspapers in the Eastern States would lead us to believe that the free coinage plank will not appear in the platform of the Democratic party. They will see their mistake when that platform is drafted. The Democrats will also fight the trusts and expansion.

"The fight to be waged against the trusts is to receive support from persons who have not previously been on our side. This will be the case particularly in the East, where the baneful effects of these organizations are apparent. Besides representing Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines as valuable market acquisitions the Republicans will claim the prosperity as due to the tariff policy. But the farmers have received no particular benefit from the prosperity and are as dissatisfied as ever.

"The election will be vastly different from that of 1896, on account of the new issues. The effect of these cannot be known until the vote is polled and no man is justified in making any prophecy as to the outcome. Both candidates carry great weight in the country."

Referring to the Alaskan boundary question the Senator did not doubt a settlement would be reached. He deprecated any thought of war. If President McKinley submitted to Congress now the same general arbitration treaty as was rejected a few years ago it would be ratified by an overwhelming majority.

There are no soldiers within reach and the settlers are inclined to allow the Indians to fight out their differences without interference.

IN HONOR OF VON MOLTKE.

Emperor to Unveil a Statue the 100th Anniversary of His Birthday.

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—On the coming 100th anniversary of the birth of the late Field Marshal Von Moltke, Kaiser Wilhelm will unveil a magnificent monument to his memory on the Koenigsplatz, the work of Prof. Uphels.

Some women don't know what it is to sleep well. In dreams they are haunted by the pains they bore through the day. There is no rest and no refreshment for them even in sleep. This condition is only one feature of many consequent upon forms of disease peculiar to women. The head aches often, or there are "spells" of dizziness or faintness, there is pain in the back or side, with bearing down pains. These are but symptoms of womanly disorders. Let the cause be removed and the pains will pass, and sleep will bring only dreams of happiness and love.

The most effective remedy for diseases of women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It dries up the debilitating drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and entirely cures female weakness.

There is no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant contained in "Favorite Prescription," neither does it contain opium, cocaine, nor any other narcotic. It is a strictly temperance medicine. Accept no substitute.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., free of all charge. Each letter is treated as a sacred confidence. Every answer is sent in a plain envelope without any printing upon it. Write without fear and without fee.

"I want to praise your medicine," writes Mrs Sarah J. Burney, of Crescent, Putnam Co., Fla. "I have been sick for twenty years and have been almost in bed five years, and now I am able to work all day. I have taken eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' and four of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and one vial of 'Pellets.' I praise your medicine to all. I had the headache but it is gone. My throat is well and cough gone and all my other troubles are better. I tried many other kinds of medicine and four doctors."

TO BE TRIED FOR TREASON.

Paul Deroulede, the Spectacular Frenchman.

POET, SOLDIER, STATESMAN.

HEAD OF THE PARIS LEAGUE OF PATRIOTS.

He Has Been a Strong Anti-Dreyfusard, and Boldly Proclaimed His Intention to Overthrow the Republic.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—The news that the French Government will send Paul Deroulede before the Senate, sitting as a court, to be tried for treason, has caused the greatest agitation among his supporters of the League of Patriots.

Deroulede is still in prison, and his friends are not permitted to hold communcation with him. In the present state of public sentiment there is little doubt that conviction would speedily follow his arraignment before the Senate. There are 15 others in prison charged with the offense for which Deroulede was arrested—plotting against the Republic.

Deroulede is 52 years old. He is tall, slight, wears a beard and looks more English than French, but he is intensely patriotic, and makes no attempt to conceal his hatred of all foreigners. He hates Dreyfus, too, and on Sunday, Sept. 25, 1898, at a meeting to protest against the revision of the Dreyfus case, he presided and delivered a furious tirade against Prime Minister Brisson and all who had shown a desire for revision. He declared that if a revolution occurred and the scaffold was erected in Paris, the first head that ought to fall was that of Clemenceau, and that if Dreyfus ever returned to France he and his partisans would be lynched. This meeting was in furtherance of the reorganization of the League of Patriots, which had been suppressed some years before by the Government. Of this reorganized league Deroulede became president. He hates so much that he hates also the constituted Government of France, and at the death of President Faure undertook to overthrow the republic and establish a government with the army as a basis. He led a procession of kindred spirits through the streets to the barracks, and was summarily arrested—not on the charge of treason, or attempted coup d'etat, of which he would have been proud, but on the more common accusation of trespass. It almost disgusted him with the profession of patriot. He is, however, still intensely bitter in his enmity to Dreyfus, and the formation of the League of Patriots is largely his own work. Besides, he is an inspiring spirit of the anti-Semitic leagues that have lately been formed in Paris. Since the affair of the barracks, Feb. 23, 1899, Deroulede has boldly proclaimed his purpose to overthrow the republic. His present arrest was decided on as a means of checking what otherwise might in time become a dangerous organization. It is found that the League of Patriots has had an existence since July, 1898, with a lingering plot to seize the Government by force. The documents captured leave no room to doubt, and a clear case seems assured against this spectacular Frenchman.

As a proof of his love of France, it must be said that when the Franco-German war broke out he went to the front, but was captured at Sedan. The Germans carried him to Breslau, but he escaped and returned to the French army, where he remained until peace was declared. Then he wrote novels and plays preaching the doctrines of revenge against the Prussians, and tending to the apotheosis of that army which seemed to him more noble in defeat than it could have been in victory.

NOT ALLOWED TO DIG GOLD.

Scientist Driven From the Mescalero Reservation in New Mexico.

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 29.—United States Indian Inspector McConnell has just returned from the Mescalero reservation in New Mexico, where he went to expel a Dr. W. N. Warren, who, it was charged, under pretense of scientific investigation, was prospecting for gold. Notable discoveries are said to have recently been made on the reservation, and Warren, it is charged, was conniving with Indians and agency officials to gain control of the gold properties.

BABY WITH AN ANCIENT AND HONORABLE LINEAGE.

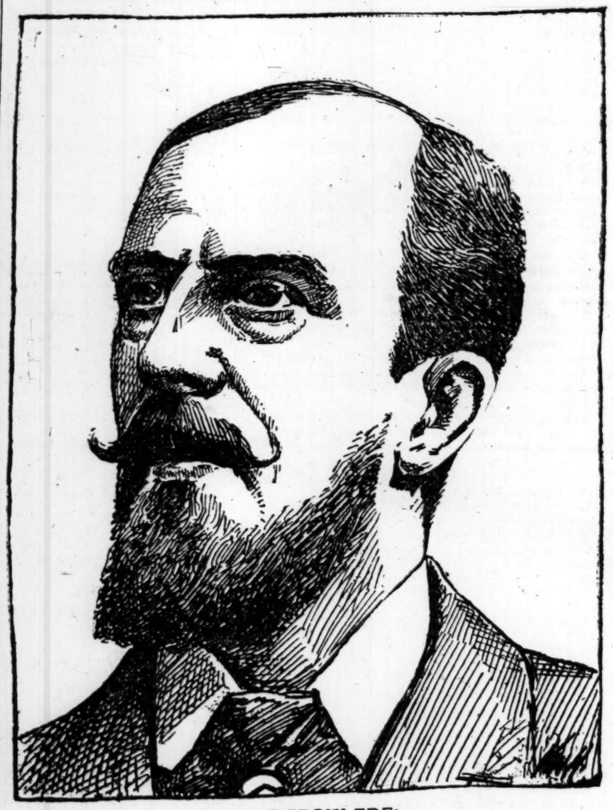

MASTER RICHARD STOCKTON JANNOPOULO

Master Richard Stockton Jannopoulo, the 3-year-old St. Louisan, who took first prize as the prettiest boy baby at Saratoga, is of ancient and honorable lineage.

His father is a member of a Greek family that traces its origin back 600 years to an exile from Russia. On the distaff side Master Jannopoulo has a long line of illustrious ancestors. His mother is a scion of the Stockton family, members of which have been persons of note in America and England for centuries. She traces her lineage back to Sir John Stockton, who was Lord Mayor of London in 1740, and through him to Richard Stockton, who was knighted on the field by King Edward IV. in 1470, and was afterwards elected to the high honor of Master of the Mercers' Company, the oldest and most exclusive association of the kind in London.

The American branch of the family settled in New Jersey and members of it were prominent in the history of the Revolution. On the maternal side Mrs. Jannopoulo's ancestors were also people of note. Two of them were colonial Governors of Virginia. It would appear from the manner in which he has begun that young Master Jannopoulo will do honor to his race.

SHOT BY HIS "BOSS."

LOUIS MEYER THE VICTIM OF A NEGRO'S ANGER.

DID NOT WORK TO SUIT HIM.

The Injured Man Is Unconscious and It Is Not Thought Possible for Him to Recover.

Louis Meyer, a white steamboat roustabout, living on Spruce street, between Second and Third streets, was shot and probably fatally wounded by an unidentified negro at the foot of Locust street Tuesday afternoon.

The bullet lodged in his abdomen. He was taken to the City Hospital, but the attending physician said there was little hope for his recovery.

The wounded man was conscious for an hour after the shooting. He claimed that the negro shot him without any provocation.

He said the negro was employed as a hand boss on the City of Memphis, which arrived here Tuesday morning and anchored at the foot of Locust street. He applied for work and was assigned to the negro, who put him to unloading lumber.

He claimed that the boss found fault with his movements and finally ordered him to pick up a bundle of lumber and run with it.

The negro became dissatisfied, he said, with the way he obeyed the order and, pulling a pistol, shot him before he had an opportunity to defend himself.

GOOD VOTE POLLED.

CONTEST IS ON IN THE EIGHTH MISSOURI DISTRICT.

DEMOCRATS EXPECT TO WIN.

They Are Claiming the Election of Shackleford Over Vorsholl by 2000 to 3000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 29.—The election is proceeding to-day in the Eighth Missouri Congressional District, composed of the counties of Cole, Callaway, Cooper, Morgan, Moniteau, Osage, Maries, Phelps, Pulaski, Miller, Camden, Laclede and Dallas. The Democrats claim Shackleford's election by from 2000 to 3000 votes, while the Republican leaders say their candidate, W. J. Vosholl, will carry the district by 1000 votes. Bland had a plurality over Vosholl in 1896 of 2800.

At noon to-day the reports from the wards in Jefferson City and the voting precincts of Cole County indicate that Dorsey W. Shackleford will carry the county by 150 votes. A good vote is being polled. Jefferson City, which always polls a Republican majority, will, from indications now, give J. W. Vosholl a slight majority.

LACLEDE COUNTY.

Republicans Seem to Be Poling a Heavy Vote.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEBANON, Mo., Aug. 29.—All indications up to 2 o'clock to-day point to the polling of a light vote by both parties in Laclede County, although the majority of the vote may not be polled until late this afternoon. No reports are obtainable from the country precincts, but the vote of Lebanon is about evenly divided, the advantage, if any, being with Vosholl. Hale's vote in the county will probably be very light. The Democratic managers state that so far the vote is unusually light, while Republican advices are that a substantial vote will be polled by them.

OSAGE COUNTY.

Vorsholl's Home Expected to Give Him a Majority.

CHAMOIS, Mo., Aug. 29.—In Osage County to-day the voting has been light, and, according to reports, at nearly all other precincts. This is Vosholl's home county, and in 1898 he carried it by over 700 over Bland. Republicans claim he will poll an increased vote to-day.

THE FINAL PLOT TO CONVICT DREYFUS

prepare to accept your judgment with respect and silence. May the judgment of this French court, towards which the whole world has its eyes turned, open up the era of reconciliation which is so necessary. (Immense excitement).

"Gentlemen, pardon me for telling you what I wish. It springs from a heart, which has no longer much to desire here below except to live to see the country great and honored. (Great commotion.)

"I have finished. I have given an exact account of the interview with the commander in chief of our armies in time of war. I have nothing to add."

M. de Freycinet had fully maintained his title to the nickname, the 'little white mouse,' which was bestowed upon him on account of his ability to speak lengthily without conveying much information."

Replying to a member of the court-martial, M. de Freycinet explained the part which he played in the ministry to which he belonged. He said he confined himself to giving effect to the government's difficulties, when the Supreme Court decided in favor of revision.

M. Demange wanted M. de Freycinet to repeat in court his statements made in the Chamber of Deputies in regard to the small importance attaching to the alleged treason, but M. de Freycinet declined to inflict them, saying the court could, however, indicate the sense of his speech. In his opinion most of the leakages could only have been of infinitesimal importance, though the information relative to covering the troops might have been important. The publication of secrets relating to arming and explosives was also dangerous. But when the witness made his speech in the Chamber of Deputies he wished above all to avoid increasing public excitement.

M. Labori: Is M. de Freycinet aware of any fact which led him to believe foreign money has played a part in the revision of the trial of 1894?

M. de Freycinet: No, no, Monsieur le President.

M. Labori: What does M. de Freycinet think of the accusations of a certain section of the press against MM. Scheurer-Kestner, Trarieux, Brisson and Ranc, and by another section, tending to attribute the opinion on the revision expressed by those persons to influence of corruption?"

Col. Jouaust: I refuse to put the question.

M. Labori insisted that he should at least be permitted to question M. de Freycinet relative to M. Scheurer-Kestner, whose statements about the letters Col. Picquart wrote to him from Tunis have been contradicted by Savignaud, Picquart's former orderly, to which the president of the court replied that the good faith of M. Scheurer-Kestner was not under discussion. Col. Jouaust added that M. Labori wished to impart passion into the proceedings.

Counsel was defending himself against this aspersion when M. de Freycinet intervened and said he did not scruple to say that M. Scheurer-Kestner was his friend, and that he had the highest opinion of his character.

M. Labori thanked the witness for this frank statement. After leaving the witness stand, M. de Freycinet took a seat beside Gen. Billot, with whom he briefly conversed. The former minister then left the courtroom, after having been excused from further attendance.

Two Witnesses Who Have No Evidence to Submit.

M. Gallichet, editor of the Drapeau, then testified. He expressed his personal indignation at the charges of treason against Henry, and repeated the gossip of a third party relative to an alleged remark Col. Cordier was overheard to make, namely: "We have taken Dreyfus with his hand in the bag."

M. Belhomme, a former inspector of schools, 78 years of age, testified that he examined, as an expert, the bordereau in the Esterhazy case, and came to the conclusion that it was not the work of Esterhazy. The witness added that he adhered to his opinion even more positively now than before.

Incidentally, M. Belhomme expressed surprise at the fact that the Court of Cassation did not take the result of his examinations into account. In conclusion, M. Belhomme declared he never believed the bordereau was in Esterhazy's writing, and added that until he actually saw him make a fresh copy of the document he would have no remark to make in regard to the handwriting of Dreyfus, which he had not sufficiently examined.

After M. Demange had asked a question or two, to which M. DBelhomme did not reply, . Demange pointed out the contradictions in M. Belhomme's original report and in his statements to-day. The court adjourned at noon until to-morrow.

SPIES ARE ON EVERY HAND

A French Chief of Detectives Describes the System by Which Persons Are Shadowed.

I. Saint-Just, formerly chief of a division of the French Secret Service, tells in the September Cosmopolitan how the Government watches nearly every individual in the nation.

He says that practically France is at the mercy of a secret service system which has its ramifications all over the country, and is centralized in Paris.

"In France everybody who has had, has or is likely to have something to do with politics, is provided (against his own will, of course), at the office of the chief of police, with a dossier politique (political docket) in which are accumulated documents, private letters, speeches, in fact every available piece of information—particularly in regard to his private life.

"Apart from the large force of secret police inspectors, whose duty is to ferret out ordinary criminals, the prefecture of police, of whom I have already spoken, is really at the head of the political police. The brigades of spies and inspectors having charge of the Anarchists are under his direct supervision. The spies, or mouchards, make their reports and the inspectors alone are concerned with the matter of arrests, when ordered. By "mouchards"—which is a slang word—the public designates all kinds of secret agents, wearing no uniform and working for the prefecture or the government in any confidential capacity.

"The Paris anti-Anarchist brigade has important branches in Barcelona, Liverpool, Rome and London. There are also other minor branches in many foreign cities.

"The prefect and his staff of secretaries are supposed to be at the head, but as a matter of fact the chief of the third division, M. Cavard, officer of the Legion of Honor, is really the chief of the secret political police. Under him are M. Baube, chief of the first bureau, who has charge of the political dockets (dossiers), and M. May, chief of the second bureau, who handles the reports of the political agents, and directs the cabinet noir, in which letters are deftly opened, read and photographed and the copies classified for the dockets. A resume of these reports is made daily and communicated (M. May communicates what he pleases) to the prefect, and to the Secretary of the Interior, also to the cabinet and the President, generally every Wednesday, which is cabinet day. To the third division belongs the staff of experts in chirography, deciphering, languages, et cetera.

"Political spies number between 700 and 800 (men and women) in all walks of life. Besides these, there are about 2000 anti-Anarchist spies in France and abroad. All these are selected from the classes of people among whom they are expected to work. The first requisite is that they have a regular occupation which they are compelled to follow, so as not to arouse suspicion. When the chief of division wants a particular man he sends after him, making an appointment at one of his offices outside of the prefecture.

"Spies never call at the prefecture, and for this reason the chiefs of division have private offices all over Paris in houses exclusively inhabited by police inspectors and employes. The janitor, even, is always a police inspector on the retired list. The chief of division, having previously ascertained that the prospective spy is likely to be enlisted—which fact has been readily discovered through the mode of life, vices and antecedents of the said spy—proceeds to let him know that the police have him under their thumb.

"As a matter of course, no harm will be done to him; he is told, on the contrary, that the gentleman who talks to him, and whom he does not know in his official capacity, takes a good deal of interest in him. He—the prospective spy—has a hard time of it, making little money, although he is very intelligent.

"Will he send two of three times a week an interesting letter about what is going on among his acquaintances? He will receive for his trouble a liberal compensation. The letters will be burnt or returned to him two hours after being received. No one will know anything about it. Money will be forwarded to him under an assumed name and he need not bother about his expenses. If he is in want of advice or substantial aid he can write or call any night by appointment at the private office. The prefecture of police is not even mentioned, and nine times out of 10 the spy is enlisted.

"To give an idea of the magnitude of this system I can vouch for the fact that each newspaper has its spies; there are spies in all secret societies, among Senators and deputies also, and more than one secretary has in former times drawn from the secret fund.

"The first thing the chief of the secret police does, when he wants to keep a close watch on any one, is to secure the services of his servants. As an example, it was said that the late Gen. Boulanger ran away from Paris and gave the government the slip. The facts are, however, that his valet de chambre, Georget, was a political spy and followed him to London and Brussels. He told me the story himself.

"Similarly, it is safe to state that Maj. Esterhazy never ran away from Paris. He could not have done so, and his demand for a safe conduct to come back to Paris and give his testimony in the Dreyfus case was a mere 'bluff.' He was advised to go, and probably paid for his trouble. I should not be surprised, either, that all his communications to the public are manufactured by the prefecture or written at the suggestion of the secret political police.

"The reports of the spies and the letters and documents stolen by them pass through the hands of M. Baube (third division above mentioned), who makes use of them for the political dockets.

"The Secretary of the Interior's office has also its spy system, which is directed by M. Bouche-Cadart, whose title is chief de la Surete Generale, or chief of the general safety. He derives most of his information from the prefecture, and also from spies scattered all over France. Strange as it may appear, the ministry of justice draws no direct information from the prefecture. The Dreyfus case demonstrates this fact beyond the shadow of a doubt."

ENLISTING RAPIDLY.

BATCH OF RECRUITS SOON TO GO TO MARE ISLAND.

OFFICERS HAVE TROUBLES.

One Woman Angry Because Her Son Was Rejected and Another Cries to Get Her's Off.

Both Capt. Bailey, United States Army, and Lieut. Wells, United States Navy, report a boom in enlistments. Lieut. Wells now has 75 men on his rolls and Thursday or Friday night the first batch will leave for the Mare Island Navy Yard at San Francisco.

They will be in charge of Carpenter William Mcdonald, who is assisting Lieut. Wells in the work of recruiting.

At San Francisco the men and boys will be turned over to the receiving ship Independence. Mr. Macdonald will go aboard the training ship Hartford, which is scheduled for a trip either around the world or around the Horn.

An order to ship 30 more apprentice boys has been received, but Lieut. Wells believes these can be gathered in a few days.

Since the boys understand that written consents from parents or guardians must be secured before their application will be considered the roll has gradually grown. There is no delay now and Surgeon Crawford has all he can attend to.

Lieut. Wells and Carpenter Macdonald have their troubles. They usually come as a result of rejection. Tuesday morning an irate mother from the South End demanded by what right her son was refused admittance into the United States Navy. Before the polite and soft-voiced Lieutenant could stop the violent flow of language he was told that "Her Johnnie was as good a lad as any snivelling officer that ever wore a white coat or beat a poor sailor," and also that her Johnnie was as well-bred and respectful as the Lieutenant himself. At the close of her discourse the woman demanded to know just what was the matter with Johnnie.

"He is three pounds underweight, madam," answered Lieut. Wells.

"And is that all?" replied the astonished woman. "I thought you meant he was unhealthy or wasn't fit to associate with the other men."

She went her way with the comforting suggestion that Johnnie might grow a little more and make up those three pounds.

Then they had the opposite case. William J. Landry had volunteered and was accepted. Tuesday his mother came in tears to the Lieutenant and begged his release. She was shown a note the lad presented purporting to have been signed by her, giving her permission to his enlistment. She acknowledged that she wrote the note, but she had repented and wanted her boy back. They had never been separated during his 19 years and she said she could not stand it now. Landry's name was stricken from the rolls.

Volunteers for the new infantry regiments are being received daily by Capt. Bailey, the army recruiting officer. The prospect of going to the Philippines and seeing some actual fighting has fired the adventurous spirits and they are finding their way into the army. It is argued that for this reason the new Philippine army will be the best fighters in the world. There is no popular excitement the man volunteers to fight wholly because he wants to fight and feels that the best object he could attack is an enemy of his country.

TO DRAIN BONFILS BOTTOM.

Special Commission Reports That It Will Cost $7000.

The special commissioners appointed for the purpose of organizing a drainage district in St. Ferdinand Township, in St. Louis County, have submitted a report to the St. Louis County Court. It is found that the cost of draining the Bonfils bottom will amount to about $7000 and that the work will necessitate the excavation of 28,888 cubic yards of earth.

The commissioners appointed by the St. Louis County Court are: Albert Jacobsmeyer of Black Jack and Sidney R. Garrett and John Wiethaup of Florissant. The farm lands of the Bonfils bottoms are regularly inundated and rendered valueless by Cowmire Creek. It is the purpose of the commissioners to straighten the creek and make the current swifter. The County Court, after listening to the report of the commission, set Wednesday, Oct. 4, as the date for a meeting of the property owners of the district for the purpose of approving or rejecting the report.

SMALL HOPE OF AVOIDING WAR.

Kruger Not Expected to Make Further Concessions.

ENGLAND PREPARED TO FIGHT.

LATEST NOTE FROM TRANSVAAL WAS OFFICIALLY EXPECTED.

Orange Free State Announces That It Will Stand by Treaty Obligations, Which Would Mean Help of the Boers.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The feeling in London since publication of Kruger's refusal to make further concessions in response to England's demand on the Transvaal is that war or Krueger's retirement are alternatives. The Reuter dispatch published yesterdal has not yet been officially confirmed, but no one doubts its accuracy, confidence in which is duo not only to the long record of absolute responsibility of the news agency, but to the fact, as well, that all private advices of commercial firms, the press in general and politicians, have predicted that the temper of the Boers was against further bowing to British power, even though war should result.

Kruger is, of course, the man mainly responsible for the position taken by the Boers, but Kruger is in full effect the Transvaal. There have been many rumors that he would resign, that he would be forced out, that his influence was waning, that he would back down—but the English public in the light of his consistent and stubborn opposition no longer believe any story of such effect. The officials never have believed that Kruger would retire or would weaken short of defeat in actual warfare. Whatever countenance has been given to all these reports has been solely for the purpose of lulling the public, and, so far as possible, making the real official feeling that war is inevitable, advantage being taken in the meantime to prepare for conflict, while the people at home were quiet in expectation of eventual compromise and the world at large put faith in the pleasant tales that promised arbitration.

President Kruger's note, though a reply, is, too, an ultimatum. While it concedes, probably, a satisfactory franchise to the Uitlanders, it stipulates the abrogation of British suzerainity. Chamberlain, secretary for the colonies, knew what was coming. He declared in advance that England would fight before such a proposition would be accepted.

The Cape Colony British are eager for war, though the Cape ministry has announced that in that event the colony will be neutral, while the Orange Free State has definitely declared that it will side with the Transvaal.

Though the war is practically here, it creates no enthusiasm whatever, even among its advocates. But it will be waged with thoroughness.

Dispatches from Cape Town say that a detachment of the Cape Town garrison will proceed to Mafoking, and a strong force from Meritzburg to Laing's Nak within 14 hours, there to await developments.

In the Cape House of Assembly yesterday debate on the question of transit of arms, ostensibly for Orange Free tSate, but presumed to be for the Transvaal, brought forth the statement from Premier Schreiner that under Customs Convention the Orange Free State was justified in importing arms through Cape Colony, and he did not intend to tear up that convention, knowing, as he did, that there would be no war.

Mr. Schreiner then read a letter from President Steyn of the Orange Free State denying any intention on the part of that Government to take up arms against the British Government or the Cape Colony. It was the final policy of the Orange Free State, President Steyn continued, never to take up arms except when attacked or in support of its treaty obligations.

The importance of President Steyn's letter to Mr. Schreiner lies in the fact that on offensive and defensive treaty exists between the Transvaal and the Orange Free State.

A dispatch from Pretoria gives this interview with President Kruger:

"Let th enewspapers bring whatever they like. I cannot say whether they report Mr. Chamberlain correctly. When he speaks to me direct I shall listen and shall know how to reply."

Commandant Gen. Joubert, in the course of an interview, declared that the whole republic would resist like one man any interference with its independence.

State Secretary Reitz said he believed Mr. Chamberlain was speaking for himself only and not for the whole British Cabinet. The situation, he declared, had not grown worse, but there was danger that a spark might fall into the magazine and do mischief.

MEANS ANNIHILATION.

Rev. Meiring Explains the Purpose of England in the Transvaal.

MONTREAL, Canada, Aug. 29.—Rev. P. J. Meiring, a pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church of Johannesburg, is in Montreal, on his way to Washington, as the representative of the Presbyterian Church of South Africa at the Pan-Presbyterian Congress, which meets in the American capital early in September. Mr. Meiring is prominent in political as well as in church circles in Johannesburg, being prominently identified with the reform or progressive party in the Transvaal and a close personal friend of Gen. Joubert, the leader of the progressists.

The agitation in the Transvaal he considers the work of interested persons in high places, whose object is not the redress of the grievances of the Uitlanders, but the wiping out of the Transvaal as an independent community and its absorption by Great Britain. Were such not the case, he asks, why the present great outcry against "Kruger oppression," which began concurrently with the victory of the reform party in the Volksraad, in April last, when, as a natural result of such victory, the extension of the franchise and the redress of other admitted grievances would follow by the free action of the Transvaal government and without the need of a resort to war.

That such is a fact Mr. Meiring recites what he terms the systematic course of oppression and cupidity practiced by England upon the Boers from the time they left Cape Colony in 1836.

"It is the glory of England," he said, "that her people have always loved freedom and have been imbued with a spirit of right and justice toward others. If it were not that a few interested persons, most of them in high places, both in England and South Africa, had succeeded in controlling all the channels of publication and had spread erroneous and misleading reports broadcast, we would hope for and receive the treatment we deserve at the hands of the English nation. I do not believe that any one who possesses right feelings, and is capable of the influence of sentiment, will be able to read the history of the Afrikanders without sympathizing with them and without reaching the conclusion that a war forced upon them by England would be criminal."

Mr. Meiring will leave for Washington in a day or two. He bears with him letters of itroduction to many prominent people in that and other cities of the United States. After leaving Johanensburg and before coming to Canada he made a brief tour through England and Scotland. He says that if the crisis in the Transvaal had occurred before he left he would have remained there till the end.

ENGLAND HAS A HARD TASK.

A German Officer Says the Boers Have an Excellent Army.

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—"If the British invade the Transvaal they will plunge into a hazardous military adventure. They will encounter an enemy such as they haven't stood up against in 40 years and unless Great Britain is ready to sacrifice blood and treasure to an amount out of all proportion with the ostensible object in view she must expect to retire from the field even more ingloriously than in 1881."

This is the opinion of a Colonel of the general staff after a sojourn of several months in the two South African Republics. He was sent there to make observations for Emperor William.

The German observer says that the united South African Republics—Transvaal and the Orange Free State are an indissoluble entity when it comes to fighting—have most perfect military organizations.

At the age of 16 every male recognizing Oom Paul as President becomes a member of the citizens' army, being at the Government's beck and call. He remains a member of the army up to the end of his 60th year.

The Boers' own statistics, which are probably "doctored for the benefit of Europe," place the number of men liable to military service at over 26,000, but if it comes to fighting that number may be easily doubled, not counting the blacks, for the Transvaal has over 137,000 white men. The male black population amounts to nearly 650,000, and of them 30,000 at least are eager to shoulder arms. They are not only eager; they are capable, having been up in rifle practice. The whites are now exchanging their old-pattern guns for Mausers. That means that the discarded rifle is to be given to the black man, who thoroughly knows how to handle them.

The English like to sneer at the Transvaal's ridiculously small standing army of 400 odd artillerists, but as a matter of fact Oom Paul has 2000 more men at his disposal, the so-called volunteers, who are in the regular pay of the State and do police service on extraordinary occasions.

The regulars, officially known as artillerists, are drilled with a view to furnish officers and instructors for the entire citizens' army, and their Colonel assumes supreme command in case of war. Under him as 32 officers capable of commanding regiments, and 80 sub-officers training for service as captains and lieutenants. The 230 privates will make first-class sergeants and corporals. The commander receives a salary of $12,500 per year, and his officers and men are better paid than the crack troops of any power in the world. Only the most intelligent and physically favored Boers are admitted to service in the State artillery; it is not a corps of hirelings composed of men who have suffered shipwreck in other vocations.

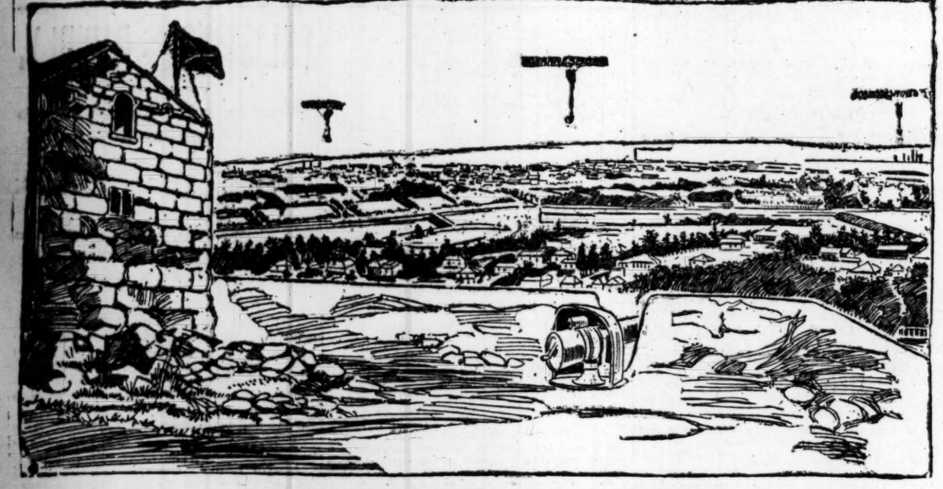

The course of instruction comprises field, mountain and siege artillery practice; telegraphy, commissariat and field lazarette duty. The men also learn to ride, a thing that commonly falls to European pioneer troops.

In case of war the volunteers' headquarters are the rallying points of each circuit; their officers assume immediate command of all comers, but are themselves subject to orders from the artillery officers.

The real army is the nation in arms. As intimated, it is impossible to give exact figures concerning its strength. The German officer says he asked men and boys of all ages in all stations of life in all parts of the Transvaal whether they would go to war, if it came to war, without ever receiving a negative, or even a doubtful answer. Even the oldest men he met thought they would be good for something as long as they had fingers to pop a gun with and eyes to see a redcoat. The Kaiser's informant thinks the citizen army comprises at least 20,000 men between the ages of 25 and 35 years. Though the majority of Uitlanders are exempted from military duty, the younger men will readily help their neighbors, he thinks. Of the 60,000 blacks able to shoulder arms, 30,000 may be relied upon to fight with a willl.

The Orange Free State, which is united to the Transvaal by a military convention, will be able to furnish at least 20,000 white fighting men. Its military forces are organized on the same footing as those of the bigger republic, but on a smaller scale, of course.

In the State artillery 150 officers and men serve; they undergo the same military training as these Transvaal elite troops. Of modern cannon the State owns 36. The artillerists enter civil offices after three years of instruction, but remain under the flag as reserves. There is now a reserve troop of 600 that in case of war will be employed to officer the citizens' army.

BOER FORT COMMANDING JOHANNESBURG.

This stronghold of the Afrikanders is being strengthened. It commands Johannesburg, being situated on an elevation within close artillery range of the town which is largely populated by "Uitlanders," the name given to all foreigners in the Transvaal. The fort is supplied with cannon of the latest design.

PRETTY CASHIER'S ELOPEMENT

MISS ETTURA ELISS BECOMES MRS. JAMES E. OWEN.

They Slipped Over to Edwardsville to Have a Quiet Wedding and Got an Editor to Witness the Ceremony.

Etturs Ellis, the comely and winsome cashier and bookkeeper at Beers' Hotel, left that hostelry Tuesday morning for the ostensibly exclusive purpose of having a day's outing.

But when the pretty cashier returns Tuesday night she will be Mrs. James E. Owen.

She and Mr. Owen, who is a clerk in the employ of the Western Engraving Company, at 216 Chestnut street, journeyed over to Edwardsville, Ill., and were married in the office of the Intelligencer, with the editor and business manager of the paper as attendants.

The bride is 20 years old, the groom twice that age.

It was desired, according to the couple, to keep the wedding a secret. Why they went to a newspaper office to become Mr. and Mrs. under such circumstances is not apparent, and is immaterial as well.

The bride is from Pana, Ill., where her family now resides. She has been in the employ of the Beers Hotel two years. Her age was not sent in the dispatch from Edwardsville. At the hotel it was guessed as 20 years. Owen is 40 years old.

It was stated at the hotel by friends of Miss Ellis that the engagement was of some months' standing, but the marriage was unexpected at this time.

The groom is a native of Louisville, Ky. He gave that city as his address at the marriage license office and the bride said she resided at Taylorville, Ill.

Fellow-employes of Owen stated that the elopement was the result of a desire to keep the bride's mployers from knowing of her marriage. She feared that she might lose her position and desired to retain it, even after she should become Mrs. Owen.

A great American remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is gradually working its way to all parts of the globe where dyspepsia and indigestion thrive. Like all American products, it is honest, and does just what it claims to do. The most stubborn cases of constipation, biliousness, nervousness, liver and kidney troubles must yield to it. It is the most perfect remedy ever devised for weak stomachs. For fifty years it has been famous for its astonishing efficacy. It is a perfectly natural remedy, and there is nothing to equal it. ## Effort to Get Mrs. Lizzie Barrett Out of the Asylum.

CITY ORDINANCE ATTACKED.

LUNACY PROCEEDINGS DECLARED T OBE UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Attorneys for a Woman Confined in the Asylum for the Insane Seek to Force the Authorities to Release Her.

The constitutionality of the city ordinance which provides that persons may be sent to the City Insane Asylum by the Board of Health without further process of law than examination of the patient by City Dispensary and City Hospital physicians, is questioned in a petition filed in the St. Louis Court of Appeals Tuesday.

The petition prays for a writ of habeas corpus, commanding Dr. Edward C. Runge, Superintendent of the City Insane Asylum, to release Lizzie L. Barrett, who, it is alleged, is unlawfully restrained of her liberty. It is addressed to Judge C. C. Bland, but he could not be found Tuesday, and the alternative order that is always a part of such proceedings will not be made until later in the week.

The ordinance in question has been in force several years and its constitutionality has never before been denied. It authorizes the confinement of persons in the Insane Asylum without an inquirendo and judgment in the Probate Court. Under it, the process of sending persons alleged to be insane to the asylum is to confine them in the observation ward of the City Hospital for a certain time. If the physician in charge becomes convinced that the patient is suffering from mental aberration, an order is made sending him to the asylum. It is not necessary to have a judgment of the Probate Court.

It is claimed in the petition that the ordinance conflicts with the national and State constitutions and with State statutes. It is in part as follows:

"Your petitioners state that said Lizzie L. Barrett is not of unsound mind and incapable of managing her affairs, nor has any information been filed or the judgment of any court been rendered against her to that effect, according to the provisions of section 5513, Revised Statutes of Missouri.

"And your petitioners further aver that it was not alleged, nor made a ground for the confinement, that the said Lizzie L. Barret was by lunacy or otherwise furiously mad or so far disordered in her mind as to endanger her own person of the peson or property of others; nor was her condition such, nor is it now such, as would support such an allegation in order to warrant even her possibly temporary confinement.

"Your petitioners further state that said imprisonment and confinement of said Lizzie L. Barrett is ilegal and without warrant for the folowing reasons, to wit:

"First—It is opposed and contrary to section 1, article xiv, of the amendments to the constitution of the United States, which provides that no State shall 'deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law.'

"Second—It is contrary and opposed to section 30, article II., of the constitution of the State of Missouri, which provides that 'No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.'

"Third—It is contrary and opposed to the spirit and provision of section 5513 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, which provides that 'If information in writing be given to the Probate Court that any person is an idiot, lunatic or person of unsound mind and incapable of managing his affairs and praying that an inquiry thereunto be had, the court shall cause the facts to be inquired into by a jury.'

"Fourth: It is contrary and opposed to the spirit and provisions of 5516 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, which provides that, 'Whenever any judge of the County Court, justice of the peace, sheriff, coroner or constable shall discover any person resident of his county, to be of unsound mind, as in section 5513 mentioned, it shall be his duty to make application to the Probate Court for the exercise of its jurisdiction, and thereupon the like proceedings shall be had as in the case of information by unofficial persons.'

"Your petitioners further state that on each and all of the aforesaid grounds the imprisonment and confinement in the St. Louis Insane Asylum of the said Lizzie L. Barrett is unconstitutional, illegal and unwarranted, any city ordinance or any regulation of any institution or board of health to the contrary notwithstanding."

Mrs. Barrett has been in the City Insane Asylum since Aug. 15. She called at the Third District Police Station Aug. 10. She asked Capt. Young several questions and he thought they were rather queer. He ordered her to be taken to the City Dispensary, from whence she was taken to the City Hospital for observation. In five days she was removed to the asylum. It is claimed that there has been no inquiry into her mental condition in the Probate Court and that she has never been adjudged insane by a jury of her peers. It is claimed that no person can be deprived of liberty without such judgment under our system of government. Wherefore, her release is asked.

It is said Mrs. Barrett has considerable property, but has recently mortgaged it heavily. Attorney Auer says her misfortunes have bothered her, but he declares she is by no means irresponsible.

John Ettman of 226 South Vandeventer avenue, a husband and father, who was employed as a clerk by his brothers, who constitute the sponge importing firm of H. L. Ettman & Co., at 11 North Seventh street, committed suicide in the cellar of the store at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

He shot himself in the head in the presence of T. A. Reavis, a city salesman for the firm. Ettman died at the City Hospital within 30 minutes after he shot himself. He will be buried from his home Wednesday.

The dead man's brother, S. L. Ettman, told the Post-Dispatch there was no reason for the suicide that he knew of, except despondency for which there was no good reason.

Ettman had been drinking and was dissatisfied with his station in life.

He went into the cellar and opened a package that was wrapped in a newspaper and took from it a pistol. Reavis asked what he was going to do with the weapon. Ettman replied, "You shall see," and, placing the muzzle of the pistol to his temple, fired.

Ettman was 32 years old. He leaves a widow and daughter. The child is 9 years old.

SHE "TOOK THINGS,"

BUT MRS. MARTHA CLEMENTS DENIES HAVING STOLEN.

A MYSTERIOUS PERSON.

Admits That She Took the Goods Found on Her, but Says She's Honest.

Mrs. Martha Clements, the well dressed, elderly woman who was arrested in Crawford's Monday afternoon on a charge of shop lifting, was arraigned in the Court of Criminal Correction Tuesday morning. She pleaded not guilty and her case was set for trial Sept. 13.

It is alleged that Mrs. Clements took articles valued at $1.85 without paying for them and concealed them in her reticule. She admitted taking them, after they were found in her possession. She denied that she intended stealing and said she took them because the clerks were too busy to wait on her.

Mrs. Clements will not talk about her case. She was represented by a Four Courts lawyer named Morris, who would not discuss her case.

Mrs. Clements appears to be about 60 years old. She lives at 4065 West Belle place. She is rather stout and was dressed in a suit of gray-checked cloth, plainly made. Her face is round and florid and her gray hair is roached back from her forehead and is partially concealed under a small black bonnet. Her gray eyes peered earnestly through a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles.

She sat inside the bar with the lawyer who represented her and intently watched the arraignment of other unfortunates. There were the usual number of men charged with assaults and petty crimes. A frown came over her face as she saw a negro woman, dirty and ragged, slouch up to the bar and plead not guilty to a charge of stealing. Another revulsion of feeling was apparent when she saw Catherine Fay, charged with abandoning an infant, approach the desk and plead not guilty.

Mrs. Clements, when her turn came, walked confidently forward and gave her answers in an audible voice. Then she turned and walked out of the courtroom. She absolutely refused to utter a word to those who questioned her other than to say testily that her affairs were no business of her questioners.

Her Husband and Friends Witnessed the Acident, but Did Not Know the Victim at First.

Mrs. Alice Waldron of 3631 Easton avenue was dragged 100 feet by a Citizens' Line car Monday night, in the sight of her husband and most intimate friends. She may die from her injuries.

When Mr. Waldron went downtown on business connected with his carriage factory, Mrs. Waldron took the 2-year-old boy across the street to chat with the neighbors. An hour later she brought the baby home and after putting him to bed returned to her friends.

She said good night at 9:30 o'clock, and started across the street to her home. An Easton avenue car was coming east. Mrs. Waldron paused in the street to let it pass, then picking up her skirts, she ran across the track and right in front of a westbound car.

The Easton avenue cars run fast and especially fast west of Grand avenue. The west-bound car had crossed that thoroughfare and the motorman had the current full on. The man at the lever could not see Mrs. Waldron until the car struck her.

Persons who witnessed the accident say that she first fell on the fender, then rolled off. The skirts that she still held in her right hand caught on the fender and kept her body from being ground under the car wheels. As it was, she was rolled and dragged fully 100 feet before the frightened motorman could stop the car.

Before he could open his gate, Waldorn was at the fender. He did not know it was his wife until he had lifted the fender and carried the unconscious woman under an are light. He was in front of his home when she was struck.

The injured woman was tenderly carried home and Dr. J. M. Grant of 4132 Easton avenue called. In addition to numerous cuts and bruises on the body the physician found a serious scalp wound at the back of the head. He is unable to tell what may develop from this.

Mrs. Waldron is unconscious a part of the time and her talk is incoherent at other times, which causes the physician to fear that the skull has been fractured.

NOT ALL CONDEMN THE WAR

Philippine Question the Cause of the Only Difference in the Ohio State Democratic Convention.

ZANESVILLE, O., Aug. 29.—There is an unusually large attendance at the Democratic State Convention this year. The 802 delegates constitute only a small part of the attendance. The only clubs in attendance in bodies are those from Cincinnati and Columbus, the homes of McLean and Kilbourne, but there are many others here from the 85 counties in the interest of these two leaders and of other candidates for Governor. The new State Central Committee selected to-day will hold over for the presidential year and the interest in the control of the party machinery is intense.

There are those present who are willing to have a strong declaration against McKinley and imperialism, but they protest against any declaration against the war in the Philippines.

There is no opposition to a declaration against Hanna's bossism or the usual issues. The Chicago platform will be reaffirmed, with a strong indorsement of Bryan. There is an unusual fight for the Committee on Permanent Organization, as the anti-McLean men object to the McLean slate, which includes Congressman J. A. Norton of Tiffin for permanent chairman and the Hon. Thomas J. Cogan of Cincinnati for secretary.

MALARIA AMONG CAMPERS

The Afflicted Are Huddled Together Near Forsyth Junction and Several Are Very Ill.

There is almost an epidemic of malaria in the settlement of campers near the Forest Park line of the Lindell Railway north of Forsyth Junction. A reporter for the Post-Dispatch visited a number of the tents and other odd looking habitats of the settlement and found eight persons suffering from bilious attacks and several of them were in a serious condition. The settlement has been named Mosquitoville, on account of the prevalence there of the two-winged insects.

Thomas Mulligan, one of the afflicted, was lying on the ground under a tree when the reporter was there. He is very ill and insists that he will not live a week longer. Mulligan is a carriage painter. He is the only support of himself and two pretty girls, all of whom occupy a tent near the center of the settlement.

John Scovin is also in a very bad shape. He has been a skeleton, suffering with malaria for several months.

Two children of L. Long, a horse trader, are afflicted and one of them may die. Long lives in a tent with his wife and eight children.

The others who are suffering with malaria are: W. N. Allingham, Henry Sherlock, John Slattery and Eva Sherlock.

The principal thoroughfare of the settlement is called Bilious street. John Scovin lives on Debility avenue. The aristocracy of the settlement are residents of Typhoid Hill. Other names are: Malaria street, Frog Pond avenue and Fever boulevard.

O'Reilly, Supervisor of City Lighting, to remove their trolley poles and wires on Sixth street, from Lucas avenue to Pine street, and their trolley wires on Washington avenue, from Third street to Eleventh street, and on Grand avenue, from Natural Bridge road to Lucas avenue.

On account of the consolidation of the lines trolleys of other branches of the system will be used at these places.

CAN'T GET SALARIES.

ELECTION COMMISSIONERS' PAYROLL NOT FULLY SIGNED.

WURZBURGER HOLDING BACK.

He Refuses to Sign Because He Does Not Want to Recognize the New Law.

Chairman James McCaffery of the Board of Election Commissioners sent to City Auditor Mason Tuesday afternoon the payroll of the office from Aug. 1 to Aug 25. It was signed only by himself. Julius Wurzburger, the secretary of the board as it was constituted under the old law, refused Monday afternon to sign the vouchers.

Chairman McCaffery says that the old law required only the chairman and secretary to sign the payroll. Deputy Auditor Mason says the old law, the same as the new, called for the signatures of all the members. However, that may be, the payroll is not in the shape required by the law as long as it is not signed by Wurzburger, who was secretary of the old board.

Wurzburger would not sign because, to do so would be to recognize the validity of the new law.

Chairman McCaffery said he sent the payroll to the Auditor because he had done all that he could and considered that it belonged in the Auditor's hands, whether it had been properly signed or not.

Deputy Auditor Mason said the payroll could certainly not be approved by the Auditor unless it was signed by all the members of the Board, but he could not say what would be done about it.

The issue of the payment of salaries under the new law will not be raised until the end of September. Chairman McCaffery said Tuesday that a payroll for the few days since Aug. 25 would not be sent in now, but would be added to the September payroll.

Excise Commissioner Higgins, Jim Cronin, Johnnie Burke and some other politicians were at the office of the Board Tuesday, "pugging" for appointments for their friends.

Chairman McCaffery said the Board will make no appointements till Sept. 1.

POLICE PAYROLL DELAYED.

Will Not Be Presented to the Auditor Until the Month Ends.

The payroll for the Police Department will not be made up for August until the expiration of the month. Then it will be made out and presented to City Auditor Mason.

Heretofore the payroll has been asked for by the City Auditor about the 24th for clerical convenience. Mr. Mason has not asked for it this month and the commissioners will not present the payroll until the work by the police has actually been accomplished. The commissioners anticipate a refusal on the part of the city officials and are prepared for the legal struggle that will follow.

The following appointments have been definitely decided upon:

KANE'S OTHER WIFE.

TURNED UP AFTER HE MARRIED ANNA MEYER.

HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW'S STORY.

Mrs. Lena Meyer Says John Kane Married Her Daughter Then Went Away.

Mrs. Lena Meyer, 2224 O'Fallon street, acting for her daughter, Anna, appeared at the Four Courts Tuesday and consulted Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Johnson regarding a bigamy warrant.

She stated that her daughter was married to John Kane of New York City in July, 1898.

After the marriage it developed that Kane had already one wife, so Mrs. Meyer wanted to know if there ought to be a warrant for bigamy issued or if her daughter ought to institute divorce proceedings.

Mrs. Meyer said: "Anna had been going with Kane for a long time, but I did not think that there was any attachment between them until they told me they were going to be married.

"Kane said that he would go on to New York and, taking my daughter with him, would fix up as nice a home for her as she would desire.

"I objected to this as I thought that he ought to have the home first.

"On account of my objections they were married secretly by a justice and then coming home told me that they were married. That evening Kane left for New York alone, saying that when the home was ready he would come back for Anna.

"The next day a woman giving her name as Mrs. John Kane called on us. She said she was Kane's lawful wife and that he had deserted her.

CHAIRMAN AKINS' CLAIMS.

Thinks If Majority Is Reduced Republicans Have Done Well.

Chairman Thomas J. Akin of the Republican State Committee is not at all confident of the elect on of Vosholl to Congress in the Bland district. He thinks Vosholl's election is more than the Republicans should expect, and believes that if the Democratic plurality is cut down to 1000 or less, as he expects it will be, the Republicans will have won a victory.

"The issues in this campaign," said Chairman Akins Tuesday morning, "are silver and expansion. If there is a great falling off in the Democratic vote and a corresponding increase in the Republican vote, we may fairly claim a victory for the Republican policy, both on the money question and the issues growing out of the war. We will know then that the people are behind the President."

Chairman Akins is not averse, however, to hazarding an estimate of the strength of the opposing candidates, in which he gives Vosholl a plurality of 450.

"The Populist candidate," he said, "will poll between 800 and 1000 votes. The rest of the Populist votes in the district will go to Shackleford and Vosholl about evenly. I figure Shackleford's purality as follows: Shannon, 1500; Maries, 450; Pulaski, 300; Crawford, 1500; Total, 2450. Vosholl's pluralities will be: Osage, 900; Cooper, 250; Moniteau and Morgan, 200 each; Dallas, 450; Laclede, 200; Camden, 300; Miller, 350. Total, 2900. This gives Vosholl a plurality over Shackleford of 450. I am willing to make that estimate, and we will see how near I come to it."

Judge Shackleford and his friends expect that he will receive between 1500 and 2000 plurality. No returns are being received by politicians in St. Louis that show the probable size of the vote, but Chairman Akins will receive returns Tuesday night.

Miss Smith and her parents say that she was engaged to the young man and that had he lived they would have been married in a very short time.

This engagement was unknown to Becker's family. Miss Smith went to work for Mr. Becker about two years ago, and her father says the attachment between them began soon after.

THEIR BED IN FLAMES.

TWO SOUND SLEEPERS NEARLY LOST THEIR LIVES.

BOARDERS FLED IN FRIGHT.

Only Slight Damage Was Done to the House and No One Was Seriously Injured.

When George Hoffman and William Conrad went to bed Monday night at their boarding house, 107 Victor street, it was an ordinary sort of a couch, but when they were awakened at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning it was a mass of flames, from which they barely escaped alive.

It was only when the flames began licking up their night robes that the sleepers were aware that their room was on fire.

A large boarding house is conducted at this number by A. J. Andresen. The men are hard workers and returned at night fagged out. They went to their third-floor room at 9 o'clock and were soon oblivious of their surroundings.

Both men are positive that they did not smoke after entering their room. It is not probable that the aid of the police will be invoked to unravel the mystery.

It was perhaps four hours after they had retired that Hoffman awoke, unable to account for the oppressiveness of the atmosphere, but he did not try to account for the smoke, which he instantly realized filled the room. He turned about for another doze.

The effect of his turn was startling. The flames, which began at his side of the bed had reached the pillow, and he had placed his head directly in them.

With a yell that startled the natives the now thoroughly awakened Hoffman made a flying leap from his bed. He returned to pull out his bed-fellow, who, between sleep and the heavy smoke, was in a state of inertia.

Their cries and the smoke, which by this time filled the house, was a good fire alarm to the rest of the inmates and, with one accord, men and women rushed out on the street, carrying with them the first articles they could lay their hands upon. The fire was confined to the one room, which was damaged about $300 worth. Hoffman and Conrad were at work Tuesday, the first shy some hair on his head and the second with a burn on his side.

ARTHUR NEWTON BADLY CUT.

He Says It Was an Accident, but the Police Will Investigate It.

Arthur Newton of 810 North Eleventh street, who keeps a boot-blacking stand at Eleventh and Washington avenue, applied to Dr. Vogel at the City Dispensary Tuesday to have a cut penetrating to the left lung treated.

He said he was hanging a picture, when the glass was accidentally broken, a piece of it cutting him.

It looked more like a stab wound, and Dr. Vogel turned Newton over to the police, after treating him.

William E. Alvery of Montgomery County Causes a Double Surprise.

William E. Alvey of Montgomery County, Mo., was thought to be dead by his relatives and friends, until Monday, when he turned up in the St. Louis County jail, charged with petit larceny. His friends were preparing to erect a monument to his memory, thinking he had been killed in Cuba.

Alvey belonged to a Kentucky regiment, and it was reported that he had been killed in a difficulty with a corporal. He denies that he is guilty of the theft of chickens.

FOUGHT HIGHWAYMEN

BEN ANDERSON AND A YOUNG WOMAN ATTACKED.

HER SCREAMS BROUGHT HELP.

The Robbers Used a "Billy" and Anderson and Got All of His Money and Watch.

As a result of a highway robbery Monday night Ben Anderson, an employe of the Gleucoe Lime and Cement Co., 1400 Old Manchester road, exhibits a black eye. The young woman who was with him at the time has been almost ill.

While waiting for a car at Fifteenth and Chestnut Anderson was suddenly assailed by two highwaymen who demanded his money. One of the men seized him by the shoulders and the other went through his pockets.

Anderson resisted and the three men fought desperately, the young woman who was with Anderson added excitement by screaming loudly for help.

The robbers, finding that they could not force Anderson to give them his money, cut him on the head with a "billy" knocking him unconscious.

When he revived he found himself locked up in a cell at the Police Station.

The assailants, after knocking him down, relieved him of a valuable watch and several dollars.

Policemen Ryan and Kennedy, hearing the young woman's screams, came to her assistance and the robbers took to their heels.

A chase followed which lasted for several blocks, where two men giving their names as William Taylor and George, alias "Red," Maloney, were arrested.

A warrant for highway robbery was issued Tuesday against the prisoners.

MUST LAY NEW PIPES IN PARKS.

High Water Pressure Can Not Be Secured With Existing Ones.

Engineer Dean of the Park Department called on Water Commissioner Flad Tuesday to request that a high pressure service be given in Forest and other parks.

He claimed that often the sprinkling carts could not get water and that the water in the lakes under the control of the Missouri Fish Commission was becoming foul.

Commissioner Flad told him that the high pressure could not be given while the service pipes in the parks were only four-inch, because of the friction and loss of velocity in forcing water through such small pipes at high pressure. He advised that 12-inch service pipes be laid.

IT WAS THROWN OUT OF COURT.

Judge Kinsey Says He Will Not Sit on "Clothes-Line" Cases.

Judge Kinsey decided from the bench of the First District Police Court Tuesday that "clothes line" fights should have no standing in his court.

At 2521 Rutger street is a two-story flat. Mrs. Hilda Rosenthal lives upstairs. On the first floor lives Mrs. H. C. Given. Mrs. Rosenthal is rather young and decidedly pretty. She is of the blonde type and dresses becomingly. Mrs. Given is middle-aged and portly.

Mrs. Given said Mrs. Rosenthal shook rugs out of the window and soiled her linen which was drying on the line. There were other little things on the same line. Then Maggie, Mrs. Given's colored servant, told how Mrs. Rosenthal shook rugs and did other things to annoy her.

Judge Kinsey listened to the recital in evident annoyance. Then he announced that his court was not one to air household grievances and linen, and unless there was an actual disturbance of the peace he would not consider the case. He ordered it thrown out of court.

Imagining that he had been robbed of $20,000,000, Louis Reisch, 23 years old, son of Joseph Reisch of 1024 Russell avenue, made such a fuss that he was arrested by the police and later lodged in the observation ward of the City Hospital.

For several months Reisch has been under the delusion that he is immensely wealthy and that all his friends and relatives are trying to rob him.

Tuesday this delusion took a violent form. With club in hand, he walked through the house hunting for his father, who, he said, had taken $20,000,000 from him.

THE WHOLE PHILOSOPHY OF SUCCESS.

"The welfare of St. Louis is the concern of every citizen of St. Louis." In this sentence Mayor Ziegenhein put the true attitude of all the people of St. Louis towards the World's Fair. It is the concern of each one and each one will share in all the benefits of the Fair. As each one would suffer from failure. It is not the project of the men who are in active service. They are merely acting for St. Louis and must be supported and aided by all St. Louisans.

With regard to the way of making the World's Fair of the greatest benefit to all, the Mayor's conclusion in yesterday's Post-Dispatch was clear and forceful.

"WE MUST GET TOGETHER AND ACT IN HARMONY. WE MUST PUT ASIDE ALL PERSONAL CONSIDERATIONS, AND WORK FOR THE GENERAL GOOD OF THE CITY IN THIS MATTER. EVERY MAN CAN DO SOMETHING, AND WHEN EVERY MAN DOES WHAT HE CAN THE BEST RESULTS ARE ACCOMPLISHED."

That embraces the whole philosophy of success and the full realization of opportunity.

It is estimated that Paris will gain about $200,000,000 from the World's Fair, and its prosperous influence is already felt. There are some St. Louisans who do not want this kind of prosperity to come to St. Louis, but fortunately they are few.

THE TIED OF FOLLY.

Friday evening, at the Vanderbilt ball at Newport, six pretty girls were tied to six rosebushes. They were so tied by the caterers who "got up" the festivities. These six young women, some or all of whom may some day become respectable matrons, were treated like bottles, or bills of fare, or bunting or any of the fancy oddities in decoration that are used to give an air of novelty to an entertainment.

Four tall footmen carried the rosebushes with the girls bound to them into the middle of the room, where the young men present drew lots for the privilege of untying the girls. Each man who got one danced with her for the rest of the evening.

If little children played at such a game, no one would be surprised. But played by young men and women, it has a distinctly barbaric flavor. It brings to mind the days when the capture of the bride was the accepted method of entering the wedded state. These young women ought to feel that they have been made to look very silly. The tide of folly in their case was reached when they were tied and unbound for the delectation of masculine fools.

If the army is costing us $31,000,000 in two months, there may be new bonds in sight before long, no matter what Mr. Gage now says.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS AND HOTEL MEN.

The "League of Commercial Travelers and Hotel Men for Co-operation in Matter of Mutual Interests, Organized to Agitate Opposition to Trusts," can exercise great, if not decisive influence upon the great issue of monopoly.

Commercial travelers and hotel men are especially exposed to the destructive power of the combines. The drummer is one of the first to fall a victim to the "economies" which are supposed to arise from combination.

The organization of the league introduces into the discussion some of the cleverest talkers and acutest thinkers in the country. The ready wit of the drummers sharpened by long experience will be employed against monopoly. They are men whose occupation has necessarily widened the scope of their observation and strengthened their faculties. The league's adherence will add an army of invaluable workers to the anti-trust cause.

The 50,000 persons who passed through Union Station on Sunday made a great crowd. If so many people reach St. Louis on a single summer Sunday of 1899, what hosts we may expect to see in 1903

CHARACTERISTICS OF CHILDREN.

The interesting observations of Prof. William E. Ashcraft of Chattanooga University, an account of which is printed in the Sunday Post-Dispatch, suggest a fruitful line of inquiry.

One of Prof. Ashcraft's conclusions is that children of American parents are generally brighter mentally, and stronger physically than children of foreigners.

This fact, if fact it be, should be traced to its cause. Is it because the American is naturally gifted with a better mentality than the foreigner, which he transmits to his children, or are the conditions of home life better calculated to promote mentality in the child during infancy?

Perhaps too much value has been attributed to inheritance and too little to conditions of life after birth, in such questions. It would be worth while to try to ascertain with more exactness the relative influence of each. Heredity has been made to account for almost every human characteristic. Has it been carelessly credited with more importance than it deserves?

In defense of his polygamous record Congressman Roberts may cite the case of the Sultan of the Sulus, who has been made an American Viceroy, with the privilege of maintaining both polygamy and slavery.

THE TABLES TURNED.

The testimony of Capt. Freystaeter in the Dreyfus trial strengthened the prisoner's case and at the same time convicted Gen. Mercier of a dastardly trick.

As related by the correspondent of the Post-Dispatch at Rennes, Gen. Mercier declared that the famous Panizzardi dispatch was not communicated to the court-martial of 1894. The first translation of this dispatch implicated Dreyfus, but the second, acknowledged to be the correct rendering, contained nothing incriminating.

Capt. Freystaeter, who was a member of the court-martial swears that the dispatch was communicated, and worse, that it was the first translation, although the correction had been made, and it is since learned that Mercier tried to have this first translation insinuated into the dossier to be submitted to the present court-martial.

The depth of infamy seems to be reached. It is acknowledged that Esterhazy is not worthy of belief and his testimony, therefore, has no weight on either side. But is Mercier any better? At this stage of the proceedings the prosecutors are on the defensive and will have quite enough to do to save themselves from ruin.

The country did not need a column or two of perfervid oratory from the President to convince it that the Pennsylvania Volunteers were brave. Slathering heroes with praise to their faces may be good politics, but it is bad taste.

A DELIGHTFUL PERFORMANCE.

Henri Dumay, special correspondent of the Post-Dispatch at Rennes, told yesterday how he discovered that former War Minister Cavaignac had not left Rennes, but is living there in seclusion, plotting with his fellow-conspirators, Mercier, Roget, Gonse and Boisdeffre. These precious rascals don civilian clothes and sneak into Cavaignac's house where they fix up new schemes with which to destroy their victim.

What a lot of spectacular villains these Generals are. The cunning and audacious villain, Mercier, chief plotter of the gang, with his forgeries and attempts to get false documents before the court; the polished villain, Roget, with his perfect fitting uniform and malicious sneer; the baffled squeaker, Gonse, and the unctuous figurehead, Boisdeffre.

Their characterizations are perfect. Their villainy is in the essential spirit of melodramatic villainy. They are clothed in fustian. They roar and defy and sneer and concoct their clumsy plots under the very noses of the judges.

Nor must we overlook the comedy characters of the drama. There is M. Bertillon, whose characterization of the scientific ass, with his trunkful of demonstrations, would adorn the comedy stage.

There is M. De Brieul, who apologetically assured the court that in mentioning the relations of Dreyfus with the wife of his friend, he did not mean to cast reflections on officers of the army, who loved their neighbors' wives. "For," he added naively, "if all officers who loved their neighbors' wives were dismissed from the army, there would be few left to defend the country."

There is our friend Guerin, who, in his barricaded newspaper office, defies the French nation and addresses the mob hourly. The police were compelled to disinfect the walls of his house. We may yet hear of his being driven from his stronghold by overwhelming odors, or by a new and powerful disinfectant, or perhaps, by the fire department's flushing the office. The surrender of the defiant Guerin and his brave compositors under the moving effect of an odor, a disinfectant or a stream of water would be an admirable finale to the farce.

It is a delightful performance which is doing much to make the civilized world forget the heat of summer.

"No one doubted at the time that England could have massed enough troops in the country in 1881 to have completely wiped out the Boers from the face of the map, had she considered the cause worth persisting in," says the Chicago Times-Herald. And no one doubts that the United States can mass enough troops in the Philippines to wipe out the Filipinos. The question is, would it be wise and just to do so? Is "the cause worth persisting in?"

A fight between Cossacks and British marines seemed imminent in China recently. If we don't proceed to take our part of the Empire, we may live to see China all Cossack or all British instead of being largely United States. We need the Chinese territory as much as we need the Philippines.

It is not long since the Administration was sending out reports of the growing friendliness of the Filipinos. Now we read that those of them who have been trusted are treacherous and want to be Filipinos all the time. Several friendly Mayors have been removed as "traitors."

If Bob Taylor fiddled himself into Congress and into the Governor's chair in Tennessee, why can't Mayor Jones, with his automobile and his speaker and singer, become Governor of Ohio? The Ohio campaign is going to be highly interesting, whatever may be the result.

Chicago will scarcely convince the people along the rivers which she is to pollute that the colon bacillus will purify the mass of filth that is to come from Chicago sewers. The thought of the colon bacillus might have been a happy one if those people were "scientific."

Without agitation nothing like equal taxation will ever be reached. If the people will interest themselves in the work a great deal can be done. Every overtaxed man is pecuniarily concerned in this matter, and every undertaxed man is morally concerned.

The colored people will perhaps be interested in Col. James Hamilton Lewis' statement that the present Administration is building up a white Republican party in the South by refusing to give important offices to negroes.

It seems that the trust-breeding laws of New Jersey were made by a Democratic Legislature and have not been repealed by a Republican body. The present Republican majority in the New Jersey Legislature is 21.

The judge who has to be "won" is as vile as any criminal that he tries. It is stated that the judges in the Dreyfus case must be won. What chance has honesty and decency before such a tribunal?

The merchant prince of a great department store might not feel quite at ease when reduced to the rank of a subordinate manager for a dry goods trust, even if his profits were increased.

As Cuba is now shown to be self-supporting, why should we be longer at the expense of keeping an army there if we do not intend to keep the island?

Freystaetter is the hero of 34 battles, but he is still more a hero as the defender of an innocent man against powerful and cruel conspirators.

Revolts, murder, corruption and slavery are reported from the French colonies. Expansion means something more than glory.

Congressman Shattuc of Ohio writes that he is "no traitor." Can he as truthfully write that he is no fool?

Dewey is likely to be a bit weary of admiration before he can be given a rest.

The tests of honor among French officers just now are capacity and willingness to lie about the Dreyfus case.

POST-DISPATCH SNAP SHOTS.

Esterhazy is pronounced Aceterhahzee, but not in the United States.

The horse-thief is passing away, and perhaps we shall not have the auto purloiner.

Perhaps Tom Reed is sawing wood enough to last him through the campaign of 1900.

Mr. Rockefeller appears as a great light to the world when his immense oil tanks take fire.

Turkeys are quoted in our market reports as "turks," regardless of what may be the feelings of Abdul.

If the Sultan of Sulu is allowed a harem, what should hinder any other American subject from getting married early and often?

Guerin is as much a prisoner as if he had been taken. In his enforced seclusion he may suffer some of the inconveniences that have fallen to Dreyfus.

It is estimated that it would take an ant 21,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 years to move the Kansas corn crop of this year. In the meantime, corn prices are not moving up.

If Col. Bob Ingersoll could see some of the spirit communications alleged to come from him he would feel sufficiently punished for all the injustice he ever did Moses or any one else.

The eucalyptus tree, which grows 10 feet in a year, makes valuable wood, gives the bees honey that has important medicinal properties, and prevents malaria, should be planted in many other places than Cuba if it is all that it is said to be. We may expect to hear of the Eucalyptus Trust sooner or later.

SOME RECENT

AN ELABORATELY ILLUSTRATED BIBLE.

A remarkable Bible, which is in the possession of Mr. W. Williamson, the Yonge street bookseller, consists of 12 great folio volumes, containing the text, each page being accompanied with illustrations, of which there are over 15,000 in the whole work. The collection is the result of the efforts of a lifetime spent by one of the greatest Biblical scholars in Canada. He sought pictures from every source, and had succeeded in getting together a collection that is most interesting and instructive. It includes reproductions in steel, wood, copper and other engravings, and chromo-lithographs, etc., of the work of some of the world's greatest masters. Among the great painters whose labors are represented are Dore, Raphael, Van Dyck, Rubens and Bartlett, while the names of the engravers are in many cases hardly less noted.—Toronto (Canada) Globe.

A NEW DEVICE TO REGISTER FARES.

A new scheme to keep tab on street car conductors is a traveling fare box, working like a cash trolley, which registers each fare as received. It can also be used in "bobtail" cars, on which conductors are unknown luxuries.

HE WAS SICKLY.

At the old settlers' annual meeting at Shelbyville, Wintroub & Son, who run a refreshment stand, put up a sign offering "all the lemonade you can drink for a nickel." A lank farmer lad, apparently in the last stages of consumption or something equally unpleasant, walked up and laid down five coppers. The venders thought they had a snap until the large glass was filled and emptied 19 times, when the customer was handed his money back and requested to complete the slaking of his thirst at the town pump. The sign was then removed.

The romantic and the realistic have each their advantages. They may be mingled with telling effect.

Permit an illustration.

"What if were I to tell you that I love you madly, and that life without you were worse than death!" exclaims Ralph, his bosom heaving with emotion.

"It would be up to me, I suppose," giggles Mame, rubbering unshyly up at him.

Perhaps it would be wrong, sociologically, to marry two such persons, but literature is literature.—Detroit Journal.

"Pooh!" exclaimed the beautiful, dark-eyed woman from Central America, "I am a Daughter of Six Revolutions."—Chicago Times-Herald.

"Don't call me a jailbird," protested Meandering Mike.

"What do you want to be called?" inquired Plodding Pete.

THE DEAD SECRET.

Deep in the cloisters of my heart
There is one hidden nook,
In which my very closest friend
Hath not my leave to look.

I bury there no crime or woe—
No soul long tempest tost;
But there I keep the page which tells
How much my outing cost.

REN BARLOW stepped out of the shadow of the woods and stood in a patch of moonlight looking toward Flint's tavern. Faint strains of music from old Craddock's fiddle reached his ears and he could hear the scuffle and tramp of feet keeping time to the measures of "Old Dan Tucker."

Ren loved a dance almost as much as he loved a fight, and he beat time with his foot as he leaned on his gun and listened. Some one opened the tavern door and a shaft of yellow light crossed the moon's silver radiance. Ren stepped back into the shadows. He could see the dancers and recognize them as they whirled by the opening. There were Jed Murray and the Widow Wild. Ren saw them and swore softly.

"Things ain't fair in this world," he said. "If I hadn't a-shot Wild last week she couldn't a-ben thar dancin' so keerless like, but I could. That ain't a man up thar that misses the departed, an' yit they air layin' for me because I put him outen the way of spoilin' their pleasure to-night."

He gazed darkly at the scene of merriment, and then, as the time-honored strains sounded louder and faster, he began moving to the measures. Now in the glare of the moon where his shadow danced with him fantastically; now back into the shade, on the edge of which cut into the moonlight again. "Forward and back! First couple lead to the right! Ladies change! Balance to the left! All hands around. Waltz."

Ren crooked his arm to embrace his vis-a-vis. But the modest shadow refused to come nearer.

"Ah, get out!" he exclaimed; "I'm goin' up to the house!"

He took out his pistols and made for the hill. The fiddle stopped with a snarl and the dancers fell back against the wall as he darkened the doorway. Lem Jeffrey and Mose Tibbs each put back his right hand; but Ren said "I've got the drop on ye," and they sort of grasped the situation. From where he stood he had the whole room covered.

"Boys," he observed, calmly, "I ain't goin' to do no shootin' t'hout it's necessary. But I be a-goin' to dance. Oh, Kit!"

His wife stepped forward. A girl supple as a tigress, with flashing black eyes.

"Hyar I be, Ren."

"Kit, hev you got any objections to my dancin' with the Widder Wild?"

"I reckon I ain't, Ren."

"Kin you hold the shootin' irons an' kiver them that does object while the dance goes on, Kit?"

"Wall, I reckon I kin!"

He handed her the pistols and she took his place in the door.

Ren walked across the room to the recently bereaved Mrs. Wild and bowed gallantly.

"Widder," he said, "I b'leeve this hyar is our waltz. Tune up, Craddock!"

The bow fell sharply on the trembling strings and the couple whirled out in perfect time with the melody. Jeffrey and Tibbs tried to move down a little from their place, but Kit's clear voice rose above the music as the shining barrels of the pistols veered in their direction:

"Boys, hyar's a-lookin' at ye!"

Round and round the room they circled. The widow's cheeks were as pink as her calico gown, and she smiled at Kit as she and Ren neared the doorway.

One whirl to the left, another to the right, then Ren sprang backward, regained the pistols, and, still walking backward, went down the moonlighted hill and reached the woods. He found his cayuse nibbling the short, green grass, and after a moment's listening to Craddock's fiddle and the scuffle and tramp of dancing feet, he mounted and rode leisurely away.—Chicago Journal.

Gives Post-Dispatch Lady Readers Advice on Correct Way to Stand.

Written for the Post-Dispatch.

NO WOMAN who stoops can have any style about her.

The woman with round shoulders may put on the most swagger French gown, but she will not look a bit smarter than though she were arrayed in a bargain-counter costume.

The Stoop-Shouldered Girl.

But round shoulders are very easily cured in young people; they are not difficult to regain in woman over thirty, and I have seen them remedied in grandmothers.

The first thing for a girl or woman to do who wants to straighten her shoulders is for her to determine to do so.

She will have to exert her will power, as one always must to break a habit. For while round shoulders are sometimes the result of a weakened system, they are far oftener the effect of a habit proceeding from carelessness.

Girls who are studying, women who read or write, or who are troubled with defective vision, are most apt to grow round-shouldered.

The best way to cure round shoulders is by beginning at night with a radical change in the sleeping position.

For all stoopers sleep upon high pillows, taking up the bad chest contracting habit at night and continuing it without intermission till morning.

One small, flat pillow is all that any one needs. The round shouldered subject should really learn to sleep without any pillow at all.

Then during every moment the subject is awake, she should make an effort to bear her infirmity in mind.

It is easy enough to stand erect—while you think of it—but a trifle hard "to remember not to forget," as the children say.

Stand straight and look up not down.

Round-shouldered persons are not often aware of the fact, but they rarely look at people in the eyes as they walk.

To acquire the habit of holding the head up there is no better practice than walking about one's room for half an hour each day with a book balanced on the head.

In addition to these simple methods practice chest expansion.

I wish all round-shouldered girls who write me, and their name is legion, would try to cure themselves and not expect that any external lotion or some absurd and senseless application will do the work miraculously.

It's quite right to give nourishment to the skin and tissues from the outside, and round-shouldered women frequently need a skin food which should be rubbed well into the chest, up and down the back and across the shoulders.

But skin food alone will accomplish very little.

You must stand erect, hold up you heads, keep the eyes on a level with people's faces, sleep in a proper position and practice persistently month in and out some form of physical culture. The very simplest chest exercises, recently described on this page, will answer.

The Girl As She Should Be.

VACATION.

If you had a week's vacation,
Where'dje go?
What'dje do?
Would you wander where the breezes
And the sunlight
Trickle through
Leafy branches of the forest,
With the softest
Light and sound,
Where the rivulet is singing
Like a linnet
Underground?

If you had a week's vacation,
Would you linger
In the dust,
Where the toilers moan and murmur
And the idlers
Rail and rust?
Or in sylvan shades and shadows
Would you loaf a
Cheery while,
Where the morning glories sparkle
And the honey-
Suckles smile?

If you had a week's vacation,
When the August
Sun is hot,
And your brain is worn and weary,
And you're "woozy,"
Like as not,
Tell me, prithee, where'dje wander
To escape the flare and frown
Of the damnable, diurnal,
Daffy doings
Of the town?

Rapid-Fire Photography.

The stupid English newspapers have been reviewing Gov. Roosevelt's war history, and are unable to understand how he was able to have so many pictures taken while he was engaged in licking Spain. Perhaps the English editors have not heard of the rapid-fire camera.

Benches in the Parks.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

We have lived at the west end of Tower Grove Park for five years and in all that time have never seen a bench in that end of the park. What is the reason for that neglect on the part of the Superintendent? It makes it very inconvenient; if one should wish to visit the park they would have to walk half way down the park to get a seat.

St. Louis. CONSTANT VISITOR.

Dark Streets of South St. Louis.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why are the arc lights so far apart on Miami street? There is a light on the corner of Nebraska avenue and Miami, then there is not another until Grand avenue. There are no lights at Michigan avenue, Minnesota avenue, Compton avenue, Virginia avenue, Louisiana avenue, Tennessee avenue. All these corners are perfectly dark. There is a light at Cherokee street and Louisiana avenue, and the next is at Chippewa street, which is also a distance of five blocks, not saying anything about Gravois Park, which is altogether dark. I say give us more light. TAXPAYER.

Prosperity With a String.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Of late I have heard considerable chaff from my Republican friends about "The cursed State of Missouri" under Democratic administration and the prosperity of our sister States—Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska—paying packing house men $2.50 per day and farm hands $2 and $2.50 per day, and even boys $1 a day under Republican administration.

Here is a sample of the advance in wages: A friend of mine, in conversation with one of Armour's men the other day, in East St. Louis, asked why the men talked of striking since they had been raised to $2.50 per day. The answer was: "Yes, we are paid at the rate of $2.50, but are not allowed to work but two days a week, and we cannot feed our families on $5 per week." The Madison Car Works advertise every day for men. When you apply for work you invariably receive the same old story, 'Come back in a day or two.'"

Most all their work is piece work and now those who are fortunate enough to get work there are to be limited to $35 total payment for two weeks; that is to say, if they earn over that they will only be paid $35. The company will only pay you this much for your services for two weeks, regardless of what you have earned, but do not pay anything for your time when you report day after day and get no work, or perhaps are allowed to make 50 or 60 cents. The company does not attempt to mask their intentions; they have conspicuous signs posted anouncing their policy.

Is this a fair sample of the boasted prosperity of our sister States (Republican) that we read about? READER.

The Slum Problem.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I confess that in to-day's issue of the Post-Dispatch I could no more understand the reform of Dr. Stanton Coit than I could the other doctor in last Sunday's issue, who taught how to live a hundred years. Mr. Coit may make a child happy for awhile, as a calf may be made happy by giving him more rope on better grass, but the child being the young lord of creation, why not give him his freedom? Why condemn him at all to live in tenements where he is deprived by law of the light and air which are the gifts of God to all? The question is simply this: To find something worth millions on millions and costing not a stroke of labor. This being found, what man having a heart, as well as intelligence, will choose to tax in preference the values which are the products of labor when the interest on these millions so found will be more than sufficient to run the Government? Who is God? Who is my brother? MILKMAN.

Plumbers, Attention!

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Now that the plumbers are to receive $4 a day, and the plumber apprentices to serve six or five and a half years at the business, why can't they, and why don't they, increase the wages of the apprentice to $4 a week the first year, and so on, instead of $3? It is an outrage for a person to work a year for $3 a week, and it is hard work, too. Hoping some journeymen plumbers will read this and take it in hand, I remain, AN APPRENTICE.

The St. Louis club was beaten again by Washington on Monday.

The Senators had their batting clothes on and walloped Cuppy, McBride and Young good and hard.

The St. Louis boys hit the ball hard, too, but were outbatted and outplayed. The final score was 14 to 12.

Cuppy started in two twirl for St. Louis, but only lasted three innings. In the third seven runs were scored by the Senators.

Cuppy was relieved here by McBride, but the college boy was also wild and helped the Washingtons to several runs.

Runs were made in every inning after this to the ninth, when Young was in the box. In the eighth one run was made off Cy and in the ninth he shut the hard hitters out.

Donl'n, Criger and Schreckengost were up in the air for a while Monday, and even little Lave Cross was rattled and made a wild throw.

Captain Anson is writing a book. For more than 30 years the ex-captain of the Chicago ball team has been famous as an athlete and during that time he has met with some strange and varied experiences not only in this country, but all over the world. From the time that he first saw the light in Marshalltown, Io., a town founded by Henry Anson, his father, to the opening of his billiard parlor in Chicago the captain's life has been full of adventure. There is scarcely a ball player of note in the country that he has not known and played with, while he has met on his travels many of the most distinguished men, both here and abroad, and his recollections and opinions regarding them cannot but be of interest, especially to the younger generation.

In his book the captain will give his experiences on and off the diamond, both of a pleasant and unpleasant character, and will throw some light upon League matters and management. The title of the work has not yet been decided upon, though it will probably be called "A Ball Player's Career."

Dick Cary, who is writing the book at the captain's dictation, predicts that it will have a big sale and that it will make something of a sensation in sporting circles.

Ex-Manager Adrian C. Anson witnessed the game yesterday afternoon with members of his family. It was the first game he had attended for many months. The old man seemed not to be particularly cast down over the hard time his successor is having in turning out a winner.—Chicago Record.

With the Amateurs.

If you don't see your score in this column to-day look for it to-morrow.

The McLean, Dunham & Co.'s team were defeated by Oak Hill by 26 to 12.

The Horse Shoes defeated the Missouri Pacific baseball team Sunday morning by a score of 28 to 10. The Horse Shoes would like to hear from some first-class city team, the Illinois Centrals preferred. Address E. C. Bennett, 6925 Plateau avenue.

The Brentwoods defeated the Kirkwoods by 8 to 4. For games with the Brentwoods address C. E. Tackett, Windom, Mo.

The Marionettes played at Maddenville, Mo., Sunday afternoon and defeated the team of that place by a score of 6 to 0. It was the best game ever played in that town. Carroll pitched a magnificent game, allowing the Maddenvilles only three hits. He also struck out eight men. Whalen caught his usual game, not allowing one man to steal a base. The whole team played a fine game, making only one error. The score by innings:

| | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Marionettes | 1 | 0 | 1 | 1 | 0 | 2 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 6 | 11 | 1 |
| Maddenvilles | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 3 | 5 |

The St. Louis Maroons defeated the Eurekas Sunday in a very one-sided game by a score of 27 to 4, the Eurekas giving in in the seventh inning, as they saw they had no chance. The batting of the city boys was beyond the average, they making 25 hits. The battery work of the Maroons was very good. The Eurekas got five hits off Beard. It was with the understanding that the winning team was to get the amount of the collection, which was supposed to be about $25. When the manager of the affair saw how things were going he politely got into his rig and drove home, without even offering the Maroons a cent, but came back and finally managed to collect 55 cents, which he offered to the Maroons for their trouble of entertaining a crowd that he had invited down. The batteries were: St. Louis Maroons, Beard and Hutchinson; Eurekas, Liber and Wall. Umpire—Smith. The St. Louis Maroons play the Eagle Bs at the Pastime grounds next Sunday at 3 p. m. This promises to be a very exciting game, as both teams are in excellent condition. Manager Lane would like to arrange a few out-of-town games, the Moberly, Mexico, Booneville, Kirkwood, Fenton, Lebanon, in Missouri, and the Odin, Lebanon, Hillsboro, Trenton, Bellville, Ill., preferred. Address all challanges to A. M. Lane, 8325 Caroline street.

The Hanrattys have reorganized, with the following players: John Hanratty c, Charles Hanratty p, Ed Hanratty 1b, Jos. Hanratty 2b, Blinkers 3b, Phleg ss, E. Casey rf, J. Casey cf, J. Kelly lf. They defeated the Evans Blues Sunday by a score of 18 to 2. Teams in the 14-year-old class wishing games address Dock Mueller, 3901 Evans avenue.

The Lexingtons played the Bentons Sunday afternoon an eleven-inning game, Lexington winning out by 4 to 3. William Wolf of the Lexingtons played the field like a professional, he getting a home run and a triple. Jones pitched a great game for the Lexingtons. For games address Charles Wippo, 1919 Dodier street.

The Lindell Reds defeated the Eagle Bs in an exciting game at Empire Park. The Reds won by good stick work of Ames, Jones, Cotter and Fahey. The score:

CHOYNSKI AND RYAN.

THESE TWO GREAT BOXERS MEET AT DUBUQUE TO-NIGHT.

SUFFIELD AND FORBES.

The Crack Chicago Bantams Will Furnish the Curtain Raiser to the Main Bout.

The Dubuque boxing tournament opens this Tuesday night, and it promises to be the biggest affair in that line ever pulled off in the West.

The Dubuque Auditorium, in which the contests are to take place, will hold over 7000 persons.

The opening event or the curtain raiser will be furnished by Clarence Forbes and Suffield, the crack Chicago bantams.

The main event this evening will bring together Joe Choynski and Australian Jim Ryan.

That a slashing fight should result from the meeting of these two well-known exponents of the fistic art goes without saying.

They will battle for a purse of $3500, of which $3000 goes to the winner and $500 to the loser.

Besides the dollars to be gained by winning the event, Choynski has other important interests at stake. He has signed to meet his old rival, Jim Hall, before the Nonpareil Athletic Club of Louisville, Ky., on Sept. 25 in a 20-round bout. If successful in his ventures against Ryan and Hall he has been promised a match with the winner of the Maher-Kennedy fight, which takes place in New York in the near future.

To be defeated by Ryan would probably mean to Joe the loss of both these engagements. Ryan has also several important matches depending on the result of the go with Choynski, and will fight to the bitter end to score a victory over the blonde-haired Californian.

Kid McFadden, the promising young bantam weight, sends in the following in reply to the offer of Frankie Noel to meet any bantam now in St. Louis:

"In reply to Frankie Noel's challenge printed in your sporting column Monday, I will meet Noel or any other bantam as fast as they come. The boxing game will open up here before very long and I will then be ready to box any one in my class. I bar no color. They all look alike to me."

Paul Murphy, the well-known local boxer, via letter to the Post-Dispatch, says:

"I received a letter from Clarence Richie to-day. He is still in Chicago. Has not got on a match yet, but has good prospects. I will leave on Sept. 10 to join him and stay in Chicago all winter. Clarence is feeling fine. He got a letter from Johnnie saying that his hand was not hurt as badly as he first thought it was. Johnnie knocked out Billy Barrett of Brooklyn last Wednesday evening in three rounds. Johnnie is matched to fight Callahan of Philadelphia, and after this fight I expect him to return to Chicago. Clarence had some hot words with Frankie Noel in Jack Burke's saloon the other night. Clarence says Noel and a gang of fighters jumped on him. No blows were struck, but some hot words were exchanged. The trouble was about Zee Hammerle. Clarence offered to bet Noel $25 that Hammerle could defeat him, but Frankie declined the offer. Billy Kauffman of St. Louis knocked out Jack Murphy of Chicago in four rounds in a bout in Chicago the other night."

Parson Davies passed through St. Louis en route to New Orleans on Monday night.

Steve Flanagan and Caspar Leon have been matched to fight before the West End Club this fall.

Jack Benner and Yank Kenney fought 25 rounds before the Coney Island Sporting Club, near New York, on Monday, and Bonner easily gained the decision.

Jim Jeffords, the big California boxer, has been matched to fight Gus Ruhlin in New York this fall.

Jack McCormack and Kid McCoy are to meet again. They will come together the latter part of October. McCormack now says that the knockout blow he gave McCoy was not a chance one by any means, and that he is sure he can beat McCoy just as quickly when they fight again.

Ben Jordan, the British featherweight, thinks that McGovern will defeat his countryman, Pedlar Palmer, on account of the latter's hands being bad.

Joe Kennedy says he knows Sharkey's style of fighting thoroughly and that if he beats Maher he will try to get the sailor for his next opponent.

THE BOXERS AT DUBUQUE.

All the Stars Are There Ready for the Big Bouts.

DUBUQUE, Io., Aug. 29.—The arrangements are complete for the big boxing carnival which begins here to-night and continues through Wednesday and Thursday nights. All of the boxers and their trainers are here putting on finishing touches to the training.

Australian Jimmy Ryan, who meets Joe Choynski the first night of the carnival, arrived in town last Friday and since then has been doing light work.

"I think I'll get the decision over you, Joe," was Ryan's greeting.

"Don't be too sure of that, Jimmy," replied Choynski. "I'm not quite ready to be put out of the game for awhile yet."

Young Kenny, who fights Jack Lewis for the lightweight championship of the West on Wednesday night, has taken up his quarters at the Julien and is exercising every care to be right when he meets the swift young fighter from his home town.

A train load of sporting men came in from Chicago Sunday night and made the betting active. It is about even money between Choynski and Ryan, and Tommy Ryan of Syracuse is favored over Jack Moffat, the prevailing odds being 10 to 7.

Word comes from Eddie Santry's camp that his condition is considerably improved, but there is no certainty yet that he will be able to meet Tommy White. Manager Lou Houseman has made ample provision for emergencies of this nature and Henry Lyons stands ready to go on against White. A go between these two would prove even more interesting than a bout between Santry and White. Lyons drew with the latter and has wonderfully improved his fighting style since that time. Lyons is a fast colored featherweight and besides possessing great hitting power, he has a great reach and much cleverness.

Tommy Ryan got in this morning from Moline, where he has been training. "I am close to 145 pounds," said Ryan. "I have been working hard, in fact, not in some time have I done so much systematic training. They tell me that Moffat has a few new ring maneuvers that may surprise me and give him the battle. My friends know that I have never yet been outpointed and there is no reason for their lack of confidence in my ability to finish Moffat in short order."

Ryan's opponent is saying very little, but is doing a whole lot of hard work. It was said yesterday at his quarters that McCoy might go in behind him. In this event, the fight will be marked by much bitterness, for Ryan, in defeating Moffat, will feel that he has rebuked the "Kid."

George Kerwin, the "Mysterious," got a look at Sellers, the colored Iowa lightweight, and laughed when he beheld his lengthy antagonist. "I guess there's a pair of us," he said, and surely there is, for both men are lanky, lean and long and ought to put up an interesting bout.

Clarence Forbes with his 108-pound physique, is eager for his battle with Con Suffield. Harry Forbes, who beat Billy Rotchford the other night in Chicago, is going into his brother's corner, and is confident that h's victory will be repeated. Suffield's friends have made the betting lively, and even forced the odds the other way.

A WESTERN TURFWAR.

OWNERS OF THE CALIFORNIA RACE TRACKS FALL OUT.

TOM WILLIAMS ON DECK AGAIN.

He Announces That the California Jockey Club Will Race on for an Indefinite Period.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—The race track war out here promises to eclipse the war that raged in Chicago a few years ago when the Garfield and Hawthorne crowds opposed each other until both were wiped off the face of the earth.

More than once during the years that racing has been carried on here track wars have been threatened, but always wiser counsels have prevailed in time to avert the threatened catastrophes, and the rival factions have agreed to work together and to divide the winter racing dates between them.

During the coming season, however, according to those best informed, it is to be war to the knife and the knife to the hilt between the factions controlled by Edward Corrigan on the one hand and Thomas H. Williams on the other.

While at present the advantage would seem to be with Williams, it is difficult to say what the next few months will bring forth, though it is safe to assert that the final result will be a curtailed racing season in California and perhaps a general closing up of the race tracks on the coast.

It is evidently the intention of the Williams-Spreckels side to drive Corrigan from the field, if possible, but the former master of Hawthorne numbers among his friends and adherents some of the richest men on the coast, and if they make up their minds to stand by him, as it is more than likely that they will, the battle is certain to be a long and stubborn one.

When the Ingleside track was first built about five years ago Adolph Spreckels was one of Corrigan's partners in the enterprise and he at that time held a large share of the stock. The track itself was a revelation to the racegoers of that section, who had never before that time seen anything better than the old historic Bay District—which has since been cut up into building lots—and in which Tom Williams and Corrigan were both interested. Williams was to all intents and purposes the manager and that he conducted things with a high hand is even now admitted by those who were familiar with the racing there.

When the Pacific Coast Jockey Club was formed and the Ingleside track built Williams was left out of the deal and Corrigan and Spreckels became the controlling spirits in coast racing. Being much alike in temperament and disposition, they soon quarreled, and finally Spreckels declared that Corrigan must either buy or sell. That he had no idea of Corrigan's being able to buy at that time is an open secret. Corrigan's Chicago troubles had, according to Dame Rumor, left him in a bad way financially, and the opportunity was thought to be a good one for forcing Corrigan out of a property that already promised to be valuable.

To the astonishment of Spreckles, however, the scheme did not succeed, for, aided by H. J. Crocker and other coast capitalists, Corrigan bought out all of the Spreckles interest in Ingleside and proceeded to run the track on a higher plane than anything known in the history of the Pacific coast racing. Money was spent upon the track in unlimited quantities and it soon became widely known as one of the handsomest and best appointed courses in the United States. It was liberal with the horsemen from the start, and, being a member of the Turf Congress, gave no purses of less value than $400, while the added money to its stakes ranged from $1000 to $10,000.

Meantime Thomas H. Williams had leased a track across the bay, at Oakland, about seven miles from San Francisco, and, though his stakes and purses were less in value than those given at Ingleside, he still had a strong following among the horsemen and his opposition soon made itself felt.

The present trouble arises from the announcement of Williams that the winter meeting of the California Jockey Club at Oakland will open Sept. 21 and that in all probability no division of dates will be agreed to, but that the track will run continuously until late in the spring.

This is nearly a month earlier than the racing began there last year, and, with the feeling growing on the coast that the season is already too long, the result cannot but be disastrous in the end. That the Ingleside people will not sit tamely and permit Tom Williams to enjoy a monopoly of the racing interests there is thought certain, and when the new track is ready, should Ingleside not be allowed to open, San Francisco will be called upon to support two tracks.

That such would be the state of affairs on the coast is a matter of regret, and well-posted men who are familiar with the situation there do not hesitate to say that racing will be made one of the issues in the next California election, and that a law will be passed there limiting the season to not more than 90 days in the vicinity of San Francisco, no matter how many tracks may be in existence there.

TURNED THE TABLES.

This Time the Hargadine-McKittrick's Defeated the Columbias.

A few days ago the Columbias beat the Hargadine-McKittricks and did a lot of crowing about it.

George Sheble, the Hargadine-McKittricks' manager, sawed wood, said nothing, strengthened his team and then got on another game with the Columbias.

It was played in Athletic Park and the Columbias, to their great surprise, were beaten by 9 to 3.

The brewery boys on this particular occasion were not in it with the dry goods men. The Columbias in this game were outplayed at every point and it is hard to understand how they ever defeated the dry goods men the first game a short time ago.

The Hargadines are the cleanest playing amateurs ever seen together, their playing being very much on the professional order.

In conversation with the manager of the Columbias a few days before this game was played he remarked that he didn't consider the Hargadines as being in the same class with his club, and the latter agree with him, as on Sunday they were so superior there was really no comparison.

The Columbias have a good pitcher in O'Connell, but his support was very much of a yellow color.

The manager of the Brewers backed his team for a short while, but when he had all his bluffs called he very soon quit, and went back to his box at the gate.

After the game was over one of the Columbia players said they could beat the Hargadines for $50 a side, but when one of the latter's friends took him up and wanted to make it a hundred he weakened and had nothing further to say.

The Hargadines are open for games with all first-class clubs, in or out of the city, Murphysboro, Hillsboro, Alton or St. Louis Sporting News preferred. Communications may be addressed to Geo. H. Sheble, manager, care of Hargadine-McKittrick D. G. Co.

West End Cocked Hat League.

At Schmidt's Alleys on North Grand avenue Tuesday night the West End Cocked Hat League was formed. Last season was the most successful in the history of the organization, and as a sign of their confidence and appreciation, the same officers were again selected that served last year. They are: President, L. A. Handy; vice-president, L. A. Manewal; secretary, Gus Bengel; treasurer, E. J. Kurtz. After transacting some minor business, the meeting adjourned to meet at Uhrig's Cave next Tuesday.

Questions Answered.

A Reader.—E. Donovan of Boston has the world's record at 100 yards, 9 3-5 seconds. Bethlene and Harry Johnson are credited with running that distance in 9¾ seconds.

BURNS RIDES BADLY.

THE CRACK ST. LOUIS RIDER FAILS TO SCORE AT HARLEM.

THE RACING AT SHEEPSHEAD.

The Dolphin Stake at a Mile and an Eighth Will Be the Feature There Tuesday.

The St. Louis horses at Harlem were not in it on Monday.

They will perhaps be heard from to-day, as in the fourth race Kensington and Midian start, while in the sixth Garland Barr and Evelyn Byrd will be the starters.

Tommy Burns, the crack St. Louis rider, made his debut at Harlem Monday, riding three horses, but failing to capture leading honors.

The best he could do was to land Jim Gore II., a 9 to 10 shot, second in the first race.

Burns also rode Sea Lion, the 11 to 5 favorite, in the third race, but the Schorr colt was never in it, the race going to Canace, with Tulane and Fausturo running second and third.

The feature at Sheepshead on Monday was the Autumn Maiden Stake, which went to Elfin Conig, a 60 to 1 shot.

Ten Candles was the favorite, with Withers a strong second choice. The favorite made all the running up to the last sixteenth, then Ildrim and Iroquois Belle caught up to him. Then on the outside came the added horse Elfin Conig, and in a driving finish the four finished heads apart, so close that none but the judges could separate them. They gave the first money to Elfin Conig, who was at 60 to 1, while Ten Candles got second.

In the Flying Handicap nearly every horse in the race was well backed. Acushla went to the front at the fall of the flag and raced there to the half, when Toluca joined her and in a few seconds Toluca was in front and won easily, with Heliobas, hard driven, in the place.

The feature at Sheepshead, Tuesday, is the Dolphin Stake at one and one eighth miles, with Lackland, 121; Survivor, 114; McLeod of Dare, 108; Gen. Mart Gary, 103; His Lordship, 108; Toluca, 103, as starters.

The meeting of the Highland Park Association over the Fort Erie course will open on Wednesday afternoon.

TO BEAT THE RACES.

A St. Louis Broker at Last Discovers a Way to Do It.

To beat the races, to speculate successfully in stocks and bonds is a scheme that many have tried and failed at.

James I. Shea, a St. Louis gentleman claimes to have solved the problem.

Mr. Shea is a broker doing business at 906 Chemical Building.

There have been many systems of handicapping tried but all of them have been failures.

Mr. Shea says that his system is a certain winner and he gives facts and figures to prove it.

"I will take the Post-Dispatch's own selections," said he, "taking the period of racing extending from Aug. 11 to 26 and will prove by them that my system is a winner.

"I started in on Aug. 11, took the Post-Dispatch's selections and tried to win $.0 to each race. From Aug. 11 to 26 I invested $88 and won $1362 on the 68 races during that time. I have kept the figures and here they are:

In explaining his system, Mr. Shea said: "You desire to win say $20 to every race you play or $120 a day. The amounts you invest on each horse or selection is determined by the odds quoted. To make this profit by this method of speculating it requires at least $6000 capital in order to be perfectly safe. In this instance $88 is all that was required because the percentage of winners (38 1-5 per cent) was greater than that given by the average handicapper."

Veteran turfmen who have looked over Mr. Shea's system can scarcely believe their eyes, but that it was a successful system during the days mentioned is proven by the above figures, which cannot lie.

THE MARKETS.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 29.
The markets opened weak and ruled sluggish during the early part of this morning's session. Though a great deal of noise was made for the benefit of visitors in the gallery, trading during the first hour was so light as to be farcical. Cables came lower and news was generally slightly bearish, though apparently not enough so to cause a marked decline. In fact, December wheat, the active option, advanced. September opened ⅜@½c off and gained ⅛c early. December opened 1-16c up and advanced ⅛c further on inside buying.
Corn was dull and practically unchanged. Oats was again sluggish.

The weather—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.
The barometer is highest over the Eastern portion of the country and the Northern Rocky Mountain slope and lowest over Southeastern Montana and off the Florida coast.
Rainfall occurred over Eastern Minnesota, Virginia, West Virginia and the Southeastern and Gulf States. Heavy rainfall was reported from Jacksonville, Fla. The temperature has fallen in Western Minnesota and the Dakotas and has risen in the extreme Northwest. Elsewhere but slight changes occurred.

MARKETS BY TELEGRAPH.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—September wheat again got fairly under 70c to-day, but did not stay there long. The opening was weak in everything, September starting ⅛c lower, at 69⅜@69½c, and declining to 69⅝c, while December opened ⅛@⅜c lower, at 71⅞@71¾c. The latter month showed more steadiness than did September and was traded in more. It advanced to 71⅞@72c and was well supported at those figures. Liverpool showed a decline of about ¾d. The weather in the Northwest was perfect for harvesting operations, and Northwest receipts were larger, though still far below last year's. There was some September liquidation at the start, but foreigners and local investors bought at the decline and prices improved. September advanced to 70c and held steady at that price. Minneapolis and Duluth receipts were 581 cars, against 306 last week and 859 a year ago. Chicago receipts were 192 cars, four of contract grade.

Corn was dull and weak for September and steady for other futures. The slack cash and foreign demand, and the increased country offerings were features. Sympathy with wheat was an influence early. Receipts were 948 cars. September opened ⅛@⅛c lower, at 30½@30⅝c, and held at about 30⅜c. December opened ⅛c lower, at 28⅜c, and advanced to 28½c.

Oats were dull and weak with wheat, and on the heavy receipts, 777 cars, with a slack cash demand. September opened ⅛c lower, at 19⅞@19⅞c, and advanced to 19⅞@20c.

Provisions were inclined to weakness at the opening, following the grain markets. Offerings, however, were light, and good support materializing, the market became firm later. HORSES AND MULES—Receipts, 325. The big special sale of range horses conducted by Campbell, Reid & Hilgert and the Western Sales Stable Co. began this morning and was the center of interest at the horse market, a large force of buyers being in attendance. The sale will be continued Wednesday. Up to 11 o'clock the plainer and medium stock only was offered, while the prices were satisfactory there was every indication that the buyers present were waiting the advent of the better grades, the prices running from $17.50 to $30 per head. One fairly good bunch was offered and the lively bidding which finally closed at $45.50 per head showed that the best stock will bring close to the prices estimated. The export buyers have their eye on several extra choice lots and competition will be brisk when they are sold. Southern buyers are also in evidence and find plenty of good stock for their line, and one well-known buyer said that the range horse supply would be a most important factor for future trade.

International Paper, American Tobacco, Brooklyn Transit showed weakness, while American Steel and Wire rose over a point.
Republic Steel became conspicuous, rising 2½ and 4 points, respectively, for the common and preferred. A number of low-priced issues forged upward, including Wheeling & Lake Erie, Hocking Valley, Kansas & Texas preferred and Chicago Great Western preferred "B", the latter rising 4 points. The standard stocks were neglected. Pressure against Sugar, Tobacco and Metropolitan Street Railway put a stop to the advance in the industrials, but a subsequent rally of 3 in Metropolitan and heavy covering in Brooklyn Transit, Manhattan and Tobacco turned them slightly upward. Louisville & Nashville, Baltimore & Ohio and Atchison preferred were notably heavy.
The persistent drop of a few of the active stocks which have advanced recently disturbed the general market and weakness became general. Republic Steel preferred dropped 2½ and Sugar, Tobacco and the local traction properties quite sharply. Important losses were also registered in Norfolk & Western, Iowa Central preferred, Southern Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande preferred and St. Paul & Duluth. The latter ran off 5 points, while American Express gained as much. Sales of stocks to noon, 299,821 shares. Prices of bonds were slightly mixed, with no decided inquiry for any particular issue.

NEW LOTTIE COLLINS

SHE IS QUERITA VINCENT, A CALIFORNIA GIRL.

SLASHING EFFECT IN COLORS.

In Black and Red Her Dancing Wins the Applause of Suburban Patrons.

Just lift the skirt
And point the toe;
Step to the left
And step just so.
With backward till
You make a swing—
That's how to dance
The buck and wing.

Querita Vincent, the dark-eyed California girl, who is dancing her way into the hearts of the Suburban's patrons this week, says dancers are born, not made; that without a natural gift for it one might as well seek to be a great painter as a great dancer.

"I don't mean by that I regard myself as great," said Miss Vincent with a nice, little laugh. "I do think, however, that I have the necessary aptitude, and as the public is kind enough to applaud my work I may be excused if I discuss myself from the standpoint of one who is successful.

"I don't remember when I could not dance, but I began to work at it in earnest about the time that skirt dancing was the rage and every girl thought that ability to kick was essential to her happiness.

"I used to practice for hours in secret, and had grown to be an expert before my mother knew anything about it. She caught me one day as I was kicking at a little Cupid that was suspended from the chandelier, and she made it warm for me.

"It took me a long time to convince her that high kicking and immorality were not synonymous. Finally I did it and now she travels with me to keep some wicked man from stealing me.

"I got my idea for my 'coon' dances while traveling with a company in the South. In New Orleans I used to go down to the levee early every morning and watch the negroes dance.

"When I saw a step I liked I would get the dancer to repeat it until I knew it by heart, then I would go to my room and practice until I had it perfected. Afterwards I would change it to suit myself and by the time I was ready to put it into a dance the originator of it would not be able to recognize it.

"I never took a dancing lesson in my life. What I know about the art I acquired by observation. I suppose my brain is in my feet.

"In the buck and wing dances the essential thing is an easy, graceful movement.

"In order to get this you must make your joints loose.

"The steps in which I seem to please most are those in which I seem about to fall to pieces. I call them my 'sloppy' steps. The negroes who dance against time originated these steps. They put them into their dances partly to give them a little rest and partly for the effect of the contrast to the brisker movement."

Miss Vincent goes in for contrasts in her costumes as well as her dancing steps. She wears a black gown, a long tan-colored coat and a white silk hat, such as Carroll Johnson affects. When she dances she grasps the skirt of the black gown, and, swish! there is a startling revelation of scarlet hose and petticoats.

"I wear red beneath the black gown for the flashy effect," said she. "It is startling at the first glance, but I think it is pleasing."

Other people agree with Miss Vincent in her opinion that the scarlet and black combination is pleasing. Not since the days of Lottie Collins has there come to St. Louis a dancer who can produce such an effect by a swirl of her skirts as this slender girl from San Francisco with the pretty Spanish name.

This is her last week in vaudeville this season, as she goes to New York next week to join Johnnie and Emma Ray.

QUERITA VINCENT.

Family Troubles.—A warrant charging assault and battery was issued Monday afternoon against Charles Aschoff, the complainants being his brother and sister, Albert and Kate Aschoff, of 1529 North Seventh street.

HE WILL PROSECUTE LARAMIE.

Louis Payeur Says a Newly Married Man Is His Son-in-Law.

Louis Payeur, a gray-haired father, went to Alton from St. Louis Monday evening and secured proof of the marriage there last Friday of John Laramie and Miss Lucy Loraine. Payeur says Laramie has run away from a young wife and child in St. Louis to marry Miss Loraine, who is his first cousin.

Mr. Payeur is the father of the St. Louis wife. He heard of the Alton wedding Monday and went to Alton to see if the records bore out the rumor. When he found the record his wrath was terrible.

He went to the Alton Chief of Police and asked that every effort be made to have Laramie and his new bride arrested. When the couple applied for a license they gave their addresses as East St. Louis and Alton. Payeur says both are from St. Louis.

The couple left Alton after the wedding and it is not known where they have gone.

Restraining Order.—As was told in Monday's Post-Dispatch, Judge Amos Thayer of the United States Court of Appeals has enjoined all the railroads, alleged to have conspired to boycott the Pittsburg & Gulf and to turn all their business from it, from carrying out the terms of the contract. The writ is temporary and will have a final hearing Sept. 23.

A Government Inquiry

is being made by the United States Senate Food Commission into the matter of food adulteration, now so prevalent.

Twice before the United States Government has made inquiries as to the ingredients and quality of the baking powders of the market.

Each time the government report has shown Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder of highest leavening strength, a grape cream of tartar powder of sterling worth, and absolutely pure and wholesome.

This is very gratifying, for Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is depended upon by millions of people to raise their daily bread.

All tests, official and practical, prove Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder to be an economical, healthful and dependable article.

NOTE.—These Government inquiries also developed the fact that there are many mixtures upon the market made in imitation of baking powder, but containing alum or other caustic acid whose use in food is dangerous.

FROST DID NOT BITE,

WAS FROM MT. VERNON, ILL., AND WOULDN'T SHAKE DICE.

THEN THE DETECTIVES CAME.

His Sight-Showing Frien and Another Arrested as Suspected Confidence Men.

Angus E. Frost lives in Mt. Vernon, Ill. He passed through St. Louis Monday on his way to Greenville, Tex. While at Union Station he was met by a sleek stranger who offered to show him the sights. He saw some of them.

"Did it cost him much?"

"No; he is one dollar ahead of the game," and thus was a sleek man surprised.

The obliging stranger seemed to know all about St. Louis and when he told Frost that in this city there was a church that had a high steeple surmounted by an immense cross of solid gold he displayed doubt. The stranger was almost offended that his word should be questioned. It was true, and if Mr. Frost would only take the trouble to walk with him a few blocks he should see the cross for himself. Frost's train did not leave for several hours and he accepted the stranger's offer.

They walked as far as Twenty-second street and Washington avenue. Here the stranger observed a saloon. He invited Frost in to have a drink. Mr. Frost took lemonade.

Then the stranger saw a man fooling with a set of dice. He thought he was pretty good at that sort of game himself and proposed to Frost that they skin the fellow.

Mr. Frost was wary. He did not care to part with his money. So he told his new friend that he did not have any money.

The stranger knew better and handed Frost a silver dollar, and the game was about to begin, when Detectives Walsh and McCarty entered the saloon.

The detectives readily recognized the man with the dice as Charles Helman, alias "Big Charley," an alleged confidence man. They didn't recognize the other men, but they suspected he was a "shark," else he would not be with "Big Charley." Both were arrested.

Mr. Frost will delay his departure to Texas, and will remain in the city at the request of the detective department and prosecute the men, although he is a dollar ahead of the men who intended fleecing him.

IS RECTOR AND JANITOR, TOO.

Friction in Mt. Calvary Episcopal Church Stirs the Pastor's Energy.

Because of the enmity of a majority of the vestrymen, the Rev. P. W. Fauntleroy, rector of Mount Calvary Episcopal Church, has for several weeks been compelled to perform the work of sexton of the church, as well as attend to his duties as pastor.

The troubles in the church date back to last April, when E. H. Albers, Lloyd G. Harris, George Minch, Lewis Lipman, William Dempster and H. H. Denison were elected vestrymen. The first four were inimical to Mr. Faunleroy. On July 31 last a majority of the vestry adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, Our rector has almost totally destroyed the income of Mount Cavalry Church by causing many of the contributors to largely reduce their contributions on account of his obnoxious conduct and actions and by inducing the rest of the contributors to withdraw their contributions altogether; be it

Resolved, That our secretary be directed to notify our sexton and organist that we must dispense with their services after July 31, 1899, because of the church's inability to pay them.

Since that time Mr. Fauntleroy has done all the work that would be required of a sexton, and Joseph Erman, a member of the church, has played the organ, without remuneration.

NINETEEN BECOME SISTERS.

They Are Received as Postulants at a St. Louis Convent.

BELT LINE PROMOTERS ACTIVE.

Urge the County Court to Give Them a Right of Way.

The county belt line promoters are still active. President J. B. C. Lucas and General Manager J. D. Houseman, Jr., of the Wellston, Creve Coeur Lake & St. Charles Railroad Co., appeared before the County Court at Clayton Monday to urge immediate action in regard to the application for the belt line franchise.

Mr. Lucas represented that the proposed road was one of great commercial necessity, and reminded the court of what he called the liberal terms offered by his company.

Col. W. F. Broadhead, attorney for the St. Louis Terminal Railway Association, spoke in the same strain.

The court took the matter under advisement.

THEY SAY IT WAS A JOKE.

Elbert McLellan and Miss Loewen Got a License to Wed.

Elbert McLellan, who is employed by the Noel-Young Bond and Stock Co., and Miss Helen Loewen, daughter of DaDvid Loewen of 6121 Washington boulevard, met on the street, and after a jesting conversation, the young man dared the young woman to go with him to the Marriage License Office. She went.

They gave fictitious names to the clerk, and the license was issued to them.

They declare that it was purely a joke.

RESENTED HIS IMPECUNIOSITY.

Thieves Beat John Oppendorfer Because He Had Very Little Money.

John Oppendorfer of 6507 South Seventh street was oppressed by the heat Sunday night and went to sleep in a neighboring lumber yard. His peaceful dreams were rudely disturbed. Some one was going through his pockets.

Opening his eyes, Oppendorfer saw two negroes standing over him. After overpowering him, they found only 35 cents in his pockets. This disgusted them and they beat Oppendorfer. He reported the case to the police, who arrested William Brown and William Coleman. They were identified by their victim.

JOINED THE URSULINE SISTERS

Seven Young Women Have Taken the Black Veil.

Seven young women entered upon lives devoted to religion Monday at the Ursuline Convent and another began her two years' novitiate. Following are those who took the black veil, the family name appearing after the religious name: Sisters Alphonse Boismenue, Ursula Immer, Columbia McDermott, Angeline Sailer, Andrea Vieth, Philberta Feldman and Felicitas Lengenhager.

Miss Matilda Prothman, who began her novitiate, will be known as Sister Rose.

The ceremony of the profession and reception was most impresisve. Mgr. Muehlsiepen, Vicar-General of the archdiocese, presided, assisted by Rev. Father Goske, chaplain of the order, and two Franciscan fathers.

The ceremonies began at 7:45 o'clock in the morning with a procession to the convent chapel. Seven little girls in white dresses carried bouquets and floral wreaths. Following them were the white-veiled sisters who that day took the full habit of the community and the black veil. Last of all was the postulant, dressed as a bride in thin white muslin and tulle veil. A candle was borne by each novice, and each carried also a cross covered with flowers. The chapel was filled with the near friends of those received, and the choir of nuns occupied the gallery.
